D. C. Facing Serious Milk Shortage By Weekend

Dairies to Ration Supplies or Stop Making of Cheese And Other Products

By Clintie Kenney
Post Staff Writer

Washington is facing a serious milk shortage which will be felt by the end of the week. The market is short on dairy products, The Post learned yesterday.

With milk supplies now 25 per cent below normal, local dairies say they are faced with a choice of abandoning production of cheese, chocolate milk, buttermilk, ice cream, whipping cream and allied products or rationing milk to customers.

Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association estimates a 10,000-gallon shortage by the week-end and expects cottage cheese, chocolate milk and buttermilk to go off the market by the end of this week, and stay off until milk supplies greatly improve.

Dairymen list four causes of the shortage which is expected to be most acute by December 1:

1. Shortage of labor, curtailing controlled breeding of dairy cattle, and reducing milk production.
2. Producers' price set so low many of them are going out of business.
3. Greatly increased demand.
4. Normal fall decrease in milk output.

A spokesman for Thompson's Dairy which delivers milk to 40,000 Washington homes, said a further aggravating factor was a premature lifting of controls on ice cream and whipping cream. He predicted that butter will become increasingly scarce.

Bruce Derrick, manager of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers, which represents 90 per cent of local dairies, says the shortage can be greatly alleviated if the OPA will agree to certain adjustments in wholesale milk price ceilings so milk can be brought in from outside the area.

Derrick has located wholesale milk dealers in Ohio and Indiana with available supplies and has transportation standing by to bring the milk here. But the Central States dealers will not sell at a price less than $3.85 per hundred pounds, he said. Present OPA

Sugar Likely To Be Rationed Through 1946

By the Associated Press

There's little hope now that sugar rationing will end before 1947, Secretary of Agriculture Anderson said yesterday.

Rationing of butter, margarine, lard and shortening may have to continue into the spring, and possibly summer, of 1946, he added, but meat may go off the ration list early in 1946.

Anderson gave this picture at a news conference at which he announced the United States has allocated liberated areas of Europe and French North Africa 50 per cent more food for the October-December quarter than in the previous quarter.

The allocation totaled nearly four million tons from a fourth quarter supply of 37 million tons.

More than 75 per cent of the food assigned to the liberated areas and North Africa is wheat and flour. In the case of meats, these foreign areas will get 347,000 tons compared with 2,473,000 tons for American civilians.

Anderson said the quantities of food being made available to Europe will "substantially meet stated requests, except for sugar, fats and oils, canned fish and rice."

The secretary was less optimistic with regard to domestic supplies

Senate Atomic Energy Adviser Envisions Push-Button War

American Delegation At San Francisco Knew of Atom Bomb

Warns Foreign Agents Could Blow Up Biggest Cities of Nation

By Mary Spargo
Post Special Writer

By the Associated Press

Atomic bomb scientists persuaded President Truman to notify the head of the American delegation at the United Nations Conference in San Francisco of the existence of the Nation's secret weapon, Congress was told yesterday.

Dr. Leo Szilard, a key figure in the prodution of the bomb, declared a number of scientists who had worked on the project "became uneasy" when they learned that the American delegation did not know of the development.

He told a gathering of Congressmen in the House caucus room that the scientists felt that the United States representatives needed the information about the bomb in order to appraise the world situation realistically.

Szilard said President Truman was prevailed upon to inform the then Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, jr., who headed the delegation.

"I would be surprised," he added, "if the other members of the delegation did not learn of this development also."

Szilard; Dr. H. C. Urey, Nobel Prize winner and one of the leading figures in the production of the atomic bomb; Dr. J. C. Stearns, who was in charge of the scientific personnel at the University of Chicago; and Dr. L. B. Borst, chairman of the Oak Ridge Atomic Sci-

A "war of the push buttons," with the hearts of America's largest cities blasted from the back rooms of foreign consulates, was envisioned yesterday by the Senate Atomic Energy Committee's chief scientific adviser.

Dr. Edward U. Condon, director of the National Bureau of Standards and mentor to the Senate atom group, declared such a prospect confronts the Nation unless a world organization is created "with complete power to know what is being done everywhere."

For, he said in an article written for Army Ordnance Magazine:

"The atomic bombs are such small and simple devices that it is easy to visualize agents of an enemy nation bringing them in in small pieces, under cover of diplomatic immunity, and assembling them quietly in the closets or back rooms of their embassies and consular offices in our chief cities.

"Then when the decision to make war is reached, the ruler of the enemy nation has merely to say the word and his agents in our country touch off the dozen or two bombs so planted in each of our major cities.

"And within minutes the entire hearts of each of them are utterly destroyed—made to resemble the recently released photographs of Hiroshima."

Cows Changed Color in Bomb Test

Alamogordo, N. Mex., Nov. 8 (AP).—State Livestock Inspector Alfred Hunter reports cattle changed color and a rancher's beard became streaked with gray following the first atomic bomb test near here last July 6.

Confessing he was skeptical before seeing the cattle, Hunter said the red-coated, white-faced Herefords appeared to have a heavy frost across their backs. Several came off the C. M. Harvey Ranch 25 or 30 miles from the bomb test site.

He said the new color was not deep and the cattle showed no signs of injury.

Will Wrye, a rancher at Bingham, N. Mex., said that following the explosion the beard on the sides of his face first appeared to have been seared and now was growing back white while the hair on his chin remained brown. He said he neither saw the bright flash nor heard the rumble which neighbors witnessed at the time.

Farm hands at the H. O. Bursum ranch near Carrizozo, N. Mex., told Hunter their cat was entirely black before the bomb test. Now it is half white.

Transit to Ask Boost in Fares If Pay Goes Up

Would Petition PUC For 3-Cent Increase To Meet Higher Cost

By John W. Ball
Post Staff Writer

Negotiations on demands of Capital Transit Co. employes for a 30-cent-an-hour increase in wages turned to the question of the company's ability to pay in initial sessions yesterday.

After a full morning session, and a 30-minute afternoon parley, representatives of the employes, company and the Labor Department adjourned. The reason given for the recess was to provide the company with time to furnish "certain statistical and financial information" requested by the union and the Conciliation Service panel appointed as an outgrowth of the day-and-a-half strike this week.

The company stated that if it is forced to grant the increase in pay to $1.25 an hour, it will have to petition the Public Utilities Commission for an average boost in fares of 3 cents. It stated the cost of service was now about 6½ cents.

1192 Cars, Buses in Service

Normal service was resumed yesterday, when 1192 cars and buses were rolling on Washington streets. That is 12 more than a week ago, the company said, but only about half the 2000 vehicles the company owns. More would be placed in operation, the company stated, if more operators were available for employment.

Yesterday's meetings at the company officers at 34th and M sts. nw. were closed to outsiders. The first session was delayed for a last-minute conference of the union negotiators. Labor Commissioner Martin J. O'Connell, panel chairman, announced that the meetings were conducted in "an orderly and cooperative manner. At the meetings:

7 Shaken Up As Engine Hits Repair Train

Seven men escaped serious injury yesterday when a Diesel switch engine smashed into a Pennsylvania Railroad wire repair train in a Union Station tunnel.

Engineer Bernard Barger, 39, of 724 Hamilton st. nw., was attempting to tie up to the two-car wire train, but his Diesel accelerated, smashed into a "rough coupling" and threw the men in the wire train in all directions.

Barger escaped with contusions of the left shoulder and leg while men in the repair cars received multiple contusions and brush burns. All were treated in the Washington Terminal first aid room and were back on the job a few hours later.

Other injured, all Pennsylvania Railroad employes, are: Perry W. Umberger, 41, of 1241 K st. ne., wrenched right knee; Lawrence Johnson, 43, of 641 6th st. ne., bruises and contusions, right arm; William J. Singer, 32, of 1616 Kenilworth st. nw., brush burns, left arm; Victor Shotts, 32, of Baltimore, contusions right arm; and Russell Quin, 38, of 3307 Otis st., Mount Rainier, Md., left chest contusions, and Joseph Palmer, 28, of Baltimore, Md.

Training Bill Saved After GOP Attack

Republicans Attempt To Shelve Measure Until Next Year But May Blocks Effort

By Robert C. Albright

A surprise GOP motion to shelve the Administration's universal training bill was blocked yesterday in the House Military Committee, as hearings on the No. 1 postwar defense measure got off to a stormy start.

The Republican move for delay followed testimony by Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson that only by training our young men can the United States build effectively for security and enduring peace.

Technicality Used

Representative Dewey Short (R., Mo.) offered the motion to postpone further hearings until after January 1. It was stopped short for the time being by a parliamentary technicality. Outnumbered Democrats made the seldom used point that the committee had no authority to vote while the House was in session.

Angered at the ruling, House Republican Whip Leslie C. Arends (Ill.), proceeded immediately to the House floor. There he blocked permission for Chairman Andrew J. May (D., Ky.), to call an afternoon meeting to hear Patterson finish his case.

May charged a Republican "filibuster" against the military training measure after Short served notice he will renew his delay motion when the committee meets again on Tuesday.

Assails GOP

"Dewey Short and his followers are trying to sabotage this program by an indirect method—they are not willing to vote 'Yes' or 'No' on it," charged the angry May.

"It is outrageous to cut off witnesses in this manner after the committee has invited them to appear and has overwhelmingly voted to hold hearings.

Secretary Patterson appeared before the committee at 10 a. m. He spoke urgently for passage until past the noon bell. He said the United States will be "the first target of attack" in the next war—that some 250,000 Americans may be killed the first day of sudden attack. To keep America in readiness—"to give the United States security and to make it possible for us to underwrite world peace"—he said every male civilian between 18 and 20 should receive one year of continuous training in modern war techniques.

Others Were Called

Secretary of the Navy James Forrestal, Edward N. Scheiberling, national commander of the American Legion, and Mrs. Charles B. Gilbert, president of the American Legion Auxiliary, were scheduled to follow Patterson. When Patterson hadn't finished his testimony at noon, Chairman May asked for

Senate Asked To Give Power For Troop Use

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday asked Congress to grant the President wide discretionary powers on use of armed forces to prevent future aggression.

The request was made in a report indorsing legislation to give the President, through his delegates on the United Nations Security Council, the power to vote troops into action without specific congressional approval.

The bill and report were filed by Committee Chairman Tom Connally, (D., Tex.)

Senator Burton K. Wheeler (D., Mont.), has promised "a real scrap" against the armed forces provision but committeemen look for favorable Senate action at an early date.

Will Be Warning

The report conceded that the bill gives broad powers to the President, but, it argued:

"This act on the part of Congress will contribute not only to public understanding within the United States but will also serve notice upon the world that as a Nation we are prepared to carry out our obligations promptly and effectively."

The committee said it "realizes that the powers proposed to be granted are very great."

"However, the basic decision in this regard was made when the Charter was ratified and this provision is simply a necessary corollary to our membership in this organization. The committee also believes that the Security Council must be placed in the most effec-

Disaster in Eritrea

Former Rep. Nichols, 7 Others Killed in Army Plane Crash

Jack Nichols, 49, vice president of TWA here and former Oklahoma Congressman, was killed in the crash of an Army plane Wednesday in Eritrea, the Army announced yesterday.

Seven other men, including two other employes of Transcontinental & Western Airlines from the Washington area, were killed in the crash.

Capt. Milo H. Campbell, 42, 1206 N. Pitt st., Alexandria, and Austin J. Naylor, 44, 5101 Watson st. nw., technical advisers to Nichols, were among the victims. Five Army crewmen who were killed were not identified by the Army.

Nichols lived in the Marlyn apartments, at 39th and Cathedral ave. nw.

The Army said the plane, a twin-engined B-25 Mitchell bomber, crashed shortly after a takeoff from the Asmara Airport for Addis Ababa, Ethiopia.

It was reported that one of the plane's engines failed after the takeoff. An official investigation was ordered.

The bodies of all of the victims, the Army announced, were buried in the U. S. military cemetery in Asmara.

TWA said Nichols and his two

Indonesians To Fight Dutch Army Landings

British Will Move Into Java Areas to Suppress Outlawry

Batavia, Nov. 8 (U.P.).—Nationalist Radio Soerabaja tonight called on Indonesians to repel the landings of a large number of Dutch troops, expected to come ashore early tomorrow morning in the Soerabaja area where Indonesians and Allied troops battled.

The broadcast asked the Indonesians to rush to the Soerabaja area—now tense but quiet under an armed truce—and prevent the landings of the Dutch soldiers who have sailed to Soerabaja from Australia, Batavia and Timor. Many armed Indonesians have been reported massing and it was feared clashes may develop into large-scale fighting.

Ultimatum Declared

Batavia, Java, Nov. 8 (AP).—A British commander in an ultimatum tonight ordered Indonesians at the Soerabaja naval base and other areas of east Java to surrender their arms by 6 a. m. Saturday or face "all the naval, army and air forces under my command."

"All Indonesians who are not willing to follow these orders will be responsible for the bloodshed which will definitely result," Maj. Gen. E. C. Mansergh, commanding Allied forces in the eastern part of strife-torn Java, declared.

One Indonesian spokesman declared the ultimatum might precipitate "terrible bloodshed."

It was issued after a day of bloody fighting on the outskirts of Batavia in which 15 Indonesians were killed and two British Indian and two Dutch soldiers were wounded.

Mansergh's letter to the Indonesian governor said: "You are hereby advised that Allied troops will enter the city and neighborhood of Soerabaja and other areas in east Java.

"I have been ordered by the commander in chief of Allied forces in the Netherlands East Indies (Lieut. Gen. Sir Philip Christison) to disarm the lawless mob,

Search of Navy Files Refused In 'Sneak' Quiz

Brewster's Motion Turned Down at Pearl Harbor Probe

By the Associated Press

Democrats on the joint congressional committee investigating Pearl Harbor yesterday rejected a Republican Senator's request that he be permitted to search Navy files for a "missing message."

Senator Brewster (R., Me.) made the motion for the search. On the vote, five Democrats opposed. Senator George (D., Ga.) voted with the four Republicans, resulting in a 5 to 5 tie. This meant the motion was lost.

Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) then moved to postpone the start of hearings until November 23. The six Democrats stood pat on the November 15 date previously fixed and the four Republicans lost again.

Phone Call to Truman

Before this action was taken, Democratic Leader Barkley (Ky.), chairman of the committee, put in a hurried call to the White House in an effort to get President Truman to correct what the Kentuckian described as a mistake in an Executive order.

The committee had submitted to the President an order under which Government employes would be permitted to divulge any information they may have about the Pearl Harbor disaster. The order would have authorized these employes to volunteer information either to the committee, its counsel or individual members.

But Senator Lucas (D., Ill.) said Mr. Truman interpreted the order as permitting individual committee members to look into Government files. Lucas said the President struck out words permitting the volunteering of information to individual members.

Wanted Correction Made

Mr. Truman was asked to correct this and agreed to do so, the Illinois Senator added. That would leave committee members barred, as individuals, from going through Government files, but permitted

Suspension Still Stands

Silver Spring Police Officer Freed on Malfeasance Charge

Capt. D. Leroy Snyder, suspended Silver Spring police substation commander, was acquitted last night by a Montgomery County Circuit Court jury after a two-day trial on charges of malfeasance in office. The case went to the jury at 3:30 p. m. and the verdict was returned at 5:15 p. m.

Cheers broke out in the courtroom as the verdict was announced. Snyder had been indicted on charges of permitting men under his command to work on his farm at Burtonsville while they were supposed to be on duty and that he falsified records to show them on duty when they actually were not.

The applause quickly was hushed as Judges Charles W. Woodward and Stedman Prescott frowned and then sent a sheriff to bring Emory Patton, a sawmill operator of near Sandy Spring, to the front. Judge Woodward admonished him severely and told him "this is not a show."

The nearly 200 persons, including a large group of policemen, gathered around Snyder and his counsel, James H. Pugh and F. Barnard Welsh, to offer congratulations.

Chief of Police H. Leslie Carlin said after the trial that decision on whether further charges will be presented to the police trial board would not be made immediately, but that in the meanwhile Capt. Snyder will remain suspended.

Snyder went on the stand in his own defense about 11:30 a. m. He said he had been on the force approximately 21 years and that fellow policemen often came out to the farm to help him out, but denied they came when they were supposed to be on duty. He said that trading days off was a common practice in the station and that it was possible a man would be

Amendment Also Raises Educational Allowances

Removes Obstacles For Veteran Aiming To Buy Business, Farm or Home

By Sam Stavisky
Post Veterans Editor

The Senate yesterday approved by voice vote an amendment to the GI Bill of Rights liberalizing the loan and educational features of the veterans legislation.

Chief effects of the amendment would be:

1. To make Government-guaranteed loans easier to get for the veteran buying home, business, or farm.
2. To raise the subsistence allowance of veterans taking advantage of the free education provision.
3. To permit veterans to take correspondence school courses and short-period high-cost technical courses.

Amendment Hailed

Spokesmen for the American Legion, which fathered the GI bill, and other veterans' organizations, hailed the amendment and urged early adoption of it by the House.

Last July the House passed its own broadening amendment, but did not go quite so far as the Senate. Chairman John Rankin (D., Miss.), of the House Veterans Committee, said last night there was not likely to be any opposition to the Senate changes, but that at any rate the legislation would be cleared by next week.

Lone point in the Senate amendment that might raise an issue is retention of Veterans' Administration approval on all loans which it guarantees (50 per cent of the loan up to $2000). The House version eliminates VA approval, and leaves the matter up entirely to the lender and the veteran-borrower.

Remove Major Issue

Both amendments remove the major bone of contention involved in the loan provision by permitting the loans to be made on the basis of "reasonable value" of the property rather than "reasonable normal value." Veterans' Administration has disallowed scores of loans on the grounds the veteran was paying too much over the "normal" value of the property, particularly in the purchase of homes and farms.

Senator Edwin Johnson (D., Colo.), chairman of the Finance Committee's subcommittee which wrote the amendment, said the full committee had been reluctant to strike out the "normal" limitation. It was finally decided, however, that, with property prices booming as they are, the loan provision would serve to little purpose if left unchanged. Only about 25,000 veterans have made use of the loan benefit, chiefly in purchasing homes.

The Senate measure gives $65 a month to single veterans and $90 to veterans with dependents for living allowance while attending school, as against $50 and $75 provided by the present law and $80 and $85 proposed in the House amendment.

The short, intensive courses and the correspondence school courses

Bucharest Troops Machine-Gun Crowd

Foster Hits Policy

Red Leader Warns U. S. On China

By the Associated Press

Communist leader William Z. Foster asserted yesterday the Administration will "precipitate civil war" in China unless it removes American troops and stops backing Generaliss.mo Chiang Kai-shek's "shaky regime."

Sharply criticizing Administration foreign policy, Foster also told the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities:

1. President Truman "has put himself at the head of the imperialists in this country by his foreign policy speech last week in New York.

2. Secretary of State Byrnes is "interfering in the Balkans . . . in an imperialistic way unjustified from the standpoint of American national interest."

Foster said the U. S. Ambassador to China, Patrick J. Hurley, "should be removed and an Ambassador sent there who will work for unity between China and the Communists."

Foster also criticized the committee, declaring it "has an anti-Soviet bias and . . . is giving every warmonger in the country encouragement . . . by this system of Red-baiting and creating a Red scare."

The committee is questioning Foster to determine whether the activities of the Communist Party in this Nation are un-American.

Russian General Intervenes to End Celebration Riots

By Frank O'Brien

Bucharest, Nov. 8 (AP).—Romanian troops fired machineguns point-blank into crowds at the royal palace today until a Russian general intervened, silenced their fire, and halted a furious riot between Communists and supporters of King Mihai.

I saw at least six persons fall when the troops machine-gunned a crowd at one entrance to the Royal Square. First estimates said at least five persons were killed and nearly 100 wounded.

Soviet General Susaikov, head of the Allied Control Commission in Bucharest, ordered the Romanian troops to cease firing, thus breaking up the bloodiest part of a 6-hour riot between Communists and demonstrators holding a forbidden celebration of the King's birthday.

Troop Line Square

Lines of armed troops tonight guarded the Royal Square, scene of the riots, but demonstrators still marched on the outskirts of the square shouting "Long Live the King" and "down with terror!"—the same fight-provoking slogans they hurled at the Communists during the day's street brawling.

The demonstration had been banned by the Soviet-supported government of Premier Petru Groza, long at odds with young King Mihai.

(The Groza government in a broadcast communique tonight charged the riots were "a blind for a revolutionary plot directed against the government" by Juliu Maniu, Peasant party leader, and George Bratianu, Liberal party leader, BBC said.

(The broadcast, recorded by NBC, charged the Peasant and Liberal Parties "have during recent weeks prepared acts of disorder and mobilized well-known Fascist and reactionary elements, under cover of Monarchist demonstrations."

(It quoted the Romanian minister of the interior as saying he had decided "to take the most severe and urgent measures to preserve order.")

For hours guns barked, fists flew, and several trucks were overturned in the milling riot which started when Communists charged the crowds celebrating Mihai's twenty-fourth birthday anniversary.

Celebration Banned

The demonstration had been banned by the Soviet-supported government of Premier Petru Groza, long at odds with the young monarch.

Fifteen truckloads of Communists, waving clenched fists and shouting "long live the Groza government," roared into the square and tried to disperse the crowd of between 40,000 and 50,000 Mihai supporters.

Fist fights started at 9:45 a. m. Just after noon the first shots were fired from the direction of the ministry of the interior, which faces the royal square.

The Communists returned the fire, and the crowds scattered.

Shooting continued sporadically until the troops fired with machine guns into the crowds at 3:50 p. m.

Russian troops in the city remained aloof, taking no part in the conflict.

(The dispatch did not say whether the first shots fired from the direction of the ministry of the interior came from the demonstrators or from troops trying to restore order.)

In addition to the Groza government's forbidding demonstrations today, a government-controlled radio broadcast warned all persons to stay at home. Yesterday's newspapers said any celebration would be suppressed.

Brewster's request for a look at the Navy files involved a search for a message about the "winds" broadcast made by the Tokyo radio before the Japanese attack on the American naval base December 7, 1941.

Senators have said that a Tokyo broadcast "East Wind, Rain," was the signal to Japanese forces that they were at war with the United States. The same Senators said this message was intercepted by naval radio monitoring stations.

Looking for Message

What Brewster is looking for, he told a reporter, is a mesage reportedly sent out by American officials on the strength of the intercepted broadcast. He has been told it is gone from the files and wants to see if only that particular file is vacant, he said.

George said he saw no objection to letting Brewster go ahead. The Georgia Senator added, however, that he thought William D. Mitchell, committee counsel, was working on the matter, and it was just as well to wait to see what he found.

Barkley told a news conference after the closed committee meeting that he and other Democrats didn't want a bunch of subcommittees conducting independent investigations.

Ferguson told a reporter he doesn't like another rule adopted at yesterday's meeting. That rule would call for initial questioning of witnesses by Mitchell without any interruptions from the Senators. Senators then could take over questioning, in order, with no interruptions.

Arlington County Board Faces Ire Of Dog Lovers

The Arlington County Board is expected to face hordes of angry dog-lovers tomorrow morning when it convenes to discuss an ordinance prohibiting the keping of more than two dogs by an Arlington family.

The amendment was drawn by Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence Douglas after some county residents objected to the density of dogs in the county.

Burglars Get $22 In Fairlington Postoffice Theft

Arlington police yesterday were investigating their second robbery in two days after burglars entered the Fairlington branch of the Arlington postoffice some time early Thursday morning.

The robbery was similar in most details to the "safe job" pulled early Wednesday morning, when thieves smashed the display window of a Safeway Store at 3409 Wilson blvd. and carried off approximately $2500 in the store safe.

Red Cross Workers Raise Bond Goal In Alexandria

Employes at Eastern Area Red Cross headquarters, 615 North St. Asaph st., Alexandria, have voluntarily raised their Victory Bond quota to $68,450 for the highest goal of any preceding bond drive.

Alexandria's quota is only $1,600,000 compared to the $3,653,022 raised in the Seventh War Loan, but Donald B. Bishoff Eastern area Victory Loan campaign chairman, said the extra effort is in partial payment for the public's support of Red Cross drives.

Highlighting the rally, Miss Bess Myerson of New York, "Miss America of 1945," urged continued bond buying "to prove that the American miss is backing the wounded service man and will not let him down."

SCIENCE

entists, all appeared in opposition to the May-Johnson bill to control the atomic bomb.

Urey, who was in charge of work on heavy water and uranium, declared that passage of the May-Johnson bill would destroy the scientific security it was trying to create.

Only full and free conferences between scientists the world over will keep America abreast of fundamental scientific developments in other parts of the globe, he said.

Dr. Stearns, whose work before the atomic bomb projects was in the field of cosmic radiation, asserted that knowledge that the atomic bomb had been discovered in the United States would make it far easier for any other country to develop it.

Looks To Future

It is the developments of the future, and not a weapon which already has been used in war which are going to become important, he maintained.

As among the discoveries as yet to be made which will put the atomic bomb in the shade, Stearns mentioned the method of using hydrogen to create helium and the release of the billions of volts in energy from mesotrons.

In the passage of the May-Johnson bill, scientists who had worked on the atomic bomb could see only continuation of the "incessant exasperation" of working for the last four years under the Manhattan District of the Army.

Such a prospect raises grave doubts, Stearns said, whether scientists would be found to continue work in peacetime on the atomic bomb.

"The endless rules and regulations of the Manhattan District frustrated scientists more than anyone can imagine," Urey told Congress.

afternoon hearings and the committee went into executive session.

With postelection absenteeism running high, Republicans in the meeting outnumbered Democrats 10 to 4 when Short offered his motion to postpone. Had it gone to a vote it would have carried. The training bill would have been placed on the hook until next session, if not for good.

Point of Order Raised

Short argued that the Senate should be made to "face the heat" on the training issue in advance of the House. A point of order was made by Representative Paul Kilday (D., Tex.), and sustained by May. Kilday based his point on the fact that the committee was trying to do business while the House was in session. Under House rules, committee business cannot be transacted while the House is meeting, without special permission. Short protested he was defeated on a technicality; and warned the next time he will make the motion befor the noon bell.

"The bill is as good as dead," Short told newsmen.

The Missouri Republican opened his fight on the bill during Patterson's testimony, saying the Secretary's statement was "filled with nuggets of gold and great truth, but it is specious at heart and very illogical."

Questions Patterson

"If we adopt this system, won't it regiment our entire national life?" asked Short.

"Do you think the eight million men who are in our Army are regimented?" replied Patterson.

"Why should we start a program that will challenge Russia or any other power to compete and outmatch us?" asked Short.

Patterson said the program is not aimed at any nation, but its effect will be to enter any aggressor from starting a war: "They will see we are on guard."

One Republican questioner—Representative Thomas E. Martin (R., Iowa), indicated complete sympathy with the program. Patterson told Martin: "I like your questions."

UAW Accuses General Motors Of Unfair Labor Practices

By the Associated Press

General Motors Corporation, the Nation's largest operating company, was accused by the CIO United Automobile Workers of unfair labor practices yesterday in the current wage dispute.

The corporation indicated it would prepare an answer to the allegation filed with the National Labor Relations Board that General Motors violated the Wagner law by refusing to bargain collectively.

Other important labor developments included:

1. Management spokesman said Louisville's costly construction program was menaced by a strike of AFL truckers among building supply and Allied firms.

Dispute Over Hours

2. Production at two Goodyear plants in Akron, Ohio, was suspended by a renewal of the CIO union's dispute over working hours.

3. An AFL union spokesman said members would resume work for Higgins Industries, Inc., New Orleans boat-builders, if A. J. Higgins would reopen his plants and retract his denunciation of strikers.

4. The number of persons on strike or indirectly involved totaled 272,000. The Talon Fastener strike spread from Meadville to Erie, Pa., and a stoppage closed the International Harvester Company plant in Fort Wayne, Ind.

Negotiations Deadlocked

In addition to accusing General Motors of unfair practices, the UAW asked services of U. S. conciliators, declaring negotiations for a 30 per cent wage rate increase were deadlocked.

General Motors flatly rejected the wage demand and offered instead a wage adjustment proposal to be based on cost-of-living rises. This the union rejected.

The UAW declared the corporation, while "pleading inability to pay a wage increase," refused at the same time to discuss with the union "its ability to pay." The company also declined to discuss its profits and price position, the union said.

Project Tied Up

Louisvilles' multimillion-dollar reconversion construction program was threatened with a complete tie-up, management spokesmen said, by a strike of more than 250 AFL teamsters that virtually halted operations of 45 to 50 builders supply and construction firms.

The union business agent termed the stoppage unauthorized and said it was called by a "rank and file committee."

In dispute was payment of a wage increase of 10 cents an hour awarded by an arbitrator. The employers said it could not be paid without War Labor Board approval and the union maintained it could.

Rubber Output Halted

Picketing by CIO United Rubber Workers halted production at the Louisville plant of B. F. Goodrich Co. Five hundred male workers refused to cross a picket line set up by 27 women laid off despite high seniority, the pickets' attorney said.

A month-old strike of 30 Louisville glaziers ended when the strikers, who had asked for a 25 cents an hour wage increase, accepted 15 cents.

A dispute over six-hour and eight-hour shifts flared anew yesterday at the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. and production in two of the five main plants was suspended for two hours.

Demand 6-hour shift

Despite instructions from CIO United Rubber Workers Union officials to remain on duty eight hours until a controversy over work schedules could be settled, maintenance and engineering workers repeated their refusal to work more than a six-hour shift.

On Wednesday 7000 persons were off the job and the two plants were virtually inoperative but the company reported yesterday morning activities were "returning to normal slowly."

In New Orleans, William L. Donnels, AFL representative, said labor was ready to cooperate and "go back to work tomorrow" at the Higgins plants if Higgins would withdraw statements "tending to create the impression that we are saboteurs, trying to keep veterans out of work and generally trying to upset the peacetime reconversion program."

Higgins previously announced he was sutting the plants "for keeps" and scrapping a 40-million-dollar bundle of orders that would have kept 30,000 persons at work at millions in annual payrolls. His statement was prompted by a strike of 2000 AFL members October 29 for a new contract.

Unification Might Have Lost War for U.S., Adm. Cooke Says

By the Associated Press

Opposing any "forced marriage" of the Army and Navy, Vice Admiral Charles M. Cooke, jr., testified yesterday that this country might have lost the recent war under such a consolidation.

Looking ahead, he said future peace for the United States will rest upon a Navy so powerful it can whip any combination of sea and naval air power.

The deputy chief of naval operations appeared before the Senate Military Committee to round out the Navy's arguments against proposals for a single armed forces department with land, sea and air branches. Admiral Cooke devoted most of a 20-page prepared argument to attacking a merger plan offered by the Army.

He said future coordination could be accomplished "without straitjacketing the Navy into the status of an Army auxiliary and thus destroy its effective role in support of our national policy and in the preservation of the national security."

Meanwhile, it was revealed that Gen. Douglas MasArthur has expressed his belief that "the professional heads" of the armed services should sit in as ex-officio members of the President's Cabinet.

The general's suggestion is included in a transcript taken by the joint chiefs of staff special committee. Thi group interviewed top Army and Navy leaders on a proposal to set up a single department of national defense.

The transcript, made public by the Senate Military Committee which is considering Army-Navy merger plans quoted MacArthur as saying at Leyte in the Philippines December 3, 1944:

"I believe that the professional heads of the services should be ex-officio members of the Cabinet. They should be present at all Cabinet meetings without power of voting, but permitted to express their opinion, and above all else, to hear the Cabinet as they discuss not only external affairs of the United States but internal problems."

Brig. Gen. F. Trubee Davison, member of the Army-Navy staff committee, was quoted as telling MacArthur his suggestion was not possible "in the Cabinet todoy the way the Government is set up."

MacArthur added:

"It was our forefathers who wrote the Constitution looking at Europe, fearful of military dictation and military influence, and they made the great mistake of trying to keep the military isolated."

Discussing MacArthur's suggestion with a reporter yesterday, Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.), acting chairman of the Military Committee said, "I disagree heartily with that plan. I think our forefathers were pretty wise. We have got to continue civilian control of the military agencies."

Senator Austin (Vt.), ranking Republican member, said he did not wish to engage in a direct controversy with MacArthur but added that this country must continue its "traditional attitude to maintain clear civilian control over the military branch."

The Grand Teton Jackson Hole region in Wyoming is regarded by scientists as an outstanding example of mountains and valleys formed by ancient internal forces breaking and lifting a section of the earth's crust.

marked working who actually had traded his time with some other officer.

Snyder said that on September 19, the day the offenses were alleged to have been committed several men came out to help but denied they were on duty. He said he warned them to be sure to leave in time to go to work. The witness said he did not know whether they left on time or not but that four days later Officer George Schnabel told him he had not gone to work an dthat he had directed Schnabel to make up the time, which he did the following week.

Captain Snyder said he did not know the others had not reported for work until after they were summoned by the grand jury. He said he had to depend upon the accuracy of his subordinates in charge of the two other shifts in making up the daily report.

Snyder said a police car was used for half an hour to tow some hay when his car was broken down in June.

Lieut. Charles Barnes, deputy commander of the Silver Spring Police Station, testified that one of the men under his command had been market present while working on Snyder's farm but that he had traded tours of duty with another policeman. He said the policeman, Coy Moorefield, often traded his tours of duty and that consequently the reports were not false because the men had traded time.

tive position possible to act under Article 41, since the prompt and effective application of economic and diplomatic sanctions by all of the United Nations (or even the threat or possibility thereof) may avoid the necessity for the use of armed forces available to the Security Council.

"The better prepared this country is to participate in action of this kind, the more effective will be the Security Council and the more hope there will be that the United Nations may serve its major purpose, namely, the prevention of armed conflict."

The committee bill would authorize the President to enter agreements with the Security Council to make armed forces available to the council. It would permit the American delegate, under direction of the President, to authorize the council to order such force into action.

It leaves open to debate the question whether the military agreements shall be ratified by the Senate as treaties or approved by both Houses by joint resolution.

The report said that majority sentiment appeared to favor action by joint resolution in line with the congressional authority over raising and maintaining armed forces.

It said that all were agreed on the basic proposition that the military agreements could not be entered into solely by executive action. Some congressional approval must be obtained, it was decided.

YESTERDAY'S ANSWER

Attendance Gains Slightly In D. C. Schools

Attendance in District public and private schools was slightly higher yesterday than Tuesday, school officials reported.

Absenteeism increased only in public senior high schools where 24 per cent of the students failed to appear in classes as compared with 23 per cent Tuesday.

In junior high schools, absenteeism dropped off 1 per cent and in teachers' colleges it decreased 10 per cent.

Classes were discontinued for the second day at Immaculate Conception Academy after only 62 of 230 enrolled students reported to school. Classes were combined at St. Patrick's Academy after an approximate one half of the students stayed out.

At St. John's College, only 20 of the 410 enrolled students were absent yesterday. Through misinterpretation, The Post reported that only 41 were present at Tuesday's classes there. Instead 41 were absent and 369 attended classes.

Gonzaga High School, which had 124 of its 597 students out of class Tuesday, reported only 80 absentees yesterday.

The most noticeable thing about the first post-strike bus ride up 16th st. nw. was the absence of any reaction of hostility, indignation or even surprise from those who boarded it. "Nobody seems to be mad at us," said Driver G. B. Painter, 716 M st. nw. "They just seem glad we're running again."

Maritime Board Enjoined From Selling Stock

A District Court judge yesterday issued an order restraining the Maritime Commission from selling 2,388,243 shares of stock in the name of the American President Lines, Ltd., in a suit brought by the Dollar Steamship Lines of California.

The suit charges the commission acquired the stock illegally.

Judge H. A. Schweinhaut granted the steamship line a restraining order and set November 15 for a hearing on the permanent injunction which the company is seeking.

The Dollar interests alleged they gave their stock to the Maritime commission as collateral to secure a $7,500,000 indebtedness owed the defendant by the former Dollar Steamship Lines of Delaware, now the American President Lines Ltd.

The suit filed by Attorney Clinton M. Hester, further held that this indebtedness has since been paid the commission in full out of earnings of the American President Lines, and therefore the commission's right to hold the stock has been extinguished.

The commission, the suit charges, had no authority "under the shipping laws of the United States" to acquire the stock except as collateral.

The commission, it said, refused to return the stock twice before and plans to sell it before Saturday.

Naval Academy Gets Racer as Present

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 8 (AP).—A new addition to the Annapolis flotilla was made today when the Figaro, a racer of the Star class, was presented to the Naval Academy by the crew of the battleship New York.

The boat, formerly the Aloha Star in the Hawaiian area and the battleship's mascot, was bought out of the ship's service profits.

Since the New York is about to be decommissioned, the Figaro was offered to the academy by Capt. Grayson Carter, USN. Vice Admiral Aubrey W. Fitch, superintendent, accepted the Figaro on behalf of the academy.

Mayor McKeldin Backs Bay Bridge

Salisbury, Md., Nov. 9 (AP).—Mayor Theodore R. McKeldin of Baltimore today was counted among the supporters of a bridge linking the Eastern Shore of Maryland with the Western Shore.

Speaking at the annual fall meeting of the Tri-County Homemakers' Council yesterday, Mayor McKeldin said "the time has come to put more ferries and a bridge across the bay so that the residents of both places can mingle more freely. A bay bridge is practical, according to the findings of engineers, and such a bridge would certainly be of great advantage to all of us."

Some 400 women from Worcester, Somerset and Wicomico Counties heard the mayor's speech.

CIO Head Battles Parley Opposition

Murray's Resolution for Resumption Of Collective Bargaining Hits Snag

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer.

CIO President Philip Murray yesterday battled his way through a stormy session of the labor-management conference's executive committee, meeting strong opposition by management, the AFL and the mine workers to his resolution calling for acceptance of President Truman's declaration that "wage increases are imperative."

Murray's resolution calling for a resumption of collective bargaining by all labor and industry within the framework of the President's statement, was introduced to the committee on Wednesday and discussed again yesterday.

It was roundly denounced by UMW head John L. Lewis, who reportedly was backed fully by AFL President William Green. At the same time, it was reported that management delegates were seeking to delete from the resolution the reference to Mr. Truman's wage statement, thus destroying the essential point for which Murray is fighting.

Position Clarified

According to Fred Smith, official press officer of the conference, Murray "clarified" his position and said he did not intend to suggest that the conference deal with any specified precentage or amount of wage increases for all branches of industry. Everyone in the committee, Smith implied, had previously had the impression that the resolution was strictly a wage-price proposition, whereas yesterday Murray made clear that it was simply a call for collective bargaining.

Smith, added that Lewis vigorously opposed the resolution as too "conservative" and "namby-pamby" and said his membership "would sue me" if he supported it.

Green was reported by several of those who attended the conference to have expressed himself "in full accord with everything Lewis said."

Resolution Opposed

From other sources, it was indicated that management mmebers of the conference also opposed the resolution and might attempt to knock off its last paragraph, which states that the "framework" for collective bargaining was provided by Mr. Truman's statement that pay increases were "imperative—to cushion the shock to our workers, to sustain adequate purchasing power and to raise the national income."

At a later press conference, Murray insisted that at no time had he intended to inject the issue of prices or wage percentages into the conference, as it was not itself a collective bargaining agency. He asked only, he continued, that the conference agree on the "imperative" need for wage increases and subscribe to the statement on that point made by President Truman in his address to the Nation 10 days ago.

He referred to the refusal on Wednesday of Benjamin F. Fairless, president of U. S. Steel Corporation, to comply with the Government's request to join again in wage negotiations with the union, and indicated that it proved the necessity for the resolution. It illustrated, Murray said, his contention that there had been a general rejection by management of collective bargaining.

Lewis Tells Objections

When Lewis received reporters he expanded on his opposition to Murray's resolution. He added the adjective, "feeble" to the proposition, and said it would "perpetuate Government control of prices and profits and the fixation of wage scales as set forth" in the President's address.

Labor, the miners' chief said, should not be limited in its bargaining. Free competition, he argued, would take care of prices when peacetime production gains impetus.

Lewis was quoted earlier by an aide as saying that collective bargaining broke down during the war because of the War Labor Board and its Little Steel Formula. He wanted to be free, he said, to try and get as much for the workers as "can reasonably be given" when price controls are dropped and to let management worry about prices and profits.

"Shocking and Arrogant"

Discussing the refusal of U. S. Steel Corporation to meet with the union and a special Labor Department conciliator, Murray branded the action as "shocking and arrogant" defiance of the Government.

Labor Secretary Schwellenbach had asked the United Steel Workers, and the stel company to meet with Arthur S. Meyer, head of the New York State Mediation Board, to resume negotiations after they had been broken off when "Big Steel" rejected the union's $2 a day wage increase proposal. Murray accepted the offer, but Fairless declined on grounds it was "futile" to discuss wage increases without higher steel price ceilings from the OPA.

Murray said the refusal raised a "fundamental question" on "the willingness of industry, particularly of U. S. Steel, to engage in collective bargaining."

New Experience

"I have never known a time," Murray said," when a labor union or an employe of labor refused to accept a call to a conference by the United States Government. Yesterday there was such a refusal when U. S. Steel arrogantly and defiantly refused to meet with a Government conciliator."

The question now, Murray continued, is "what next?" He said the answer was up to the Government.

Schwellenbach is understood to be working on the problem of "what next?" but has not yet disclosed his plans. One Labor Department source indicated that there was a possibility that the company would withdraw from its position of refusing the request.

Lewis and Murray Wrangle at Parley

At yesterday's session of the labor-management executive committee, there was a terse and angry exchange between CIO head Philip Murray and miner workers' boss John L. Lewis, the International News Service reported.

Angered when Lewis called his resolution "namby-pamby," Murray told Lewis that "the CIO is not afraid of anybody, and I'm not afraid of you."

"Nuts," Lewis replied.

"Nuts to you," Murray countered.

Hans Kindler Gives Varied Musical Diet

By Ray C. B. Brown

Hans Kindler conducts the National Orchestra on Wednesday night in Constitution Hall. Program: Leonore Overture No. 3 (Beethoven), Symphony No. 1 (Barber), Three Dances from the ballet, Gayaneh (Khachaturyan), Traueme, Walkuerenritt and Finale from Die Goetterdaemmerung (Wagner).

Novelties and familiar works known in the profession as warhorses were neatly balanced by Hans Kindler in his program for the National Orchestra's second Wednesday concert last evening in Constitution Hall. He began with an admirable reading of Beethoven's third "Leonore" overture, a reading distinguished by its care for the atmosphere of suspense in the opening measures, the pacing of the action and the building of dramatic climaxes, and he closed the program with expositions of the yearning passion of "Traeume," the parade of the "Ride of the Valkyries" and the flamboyant colors of the closing scene from "The Twilight of the Gods" as samples of the Wagnerian mastery.

First local performances were given of Samuel Barber's revised Symphony No. 1 and three dances from Aram Khachaturyan's "Gayaneh" ballet. Barber's symphony in one movement obviously suffers from the compression imposed upon the classic form, but it represents the best qualities of the young American composer, whose idealism prevails over the temptation to write fashionable music. Every serious composer today has to meet this conflict between tradition and revolt, and resolve it as best he can. Barber's temperament is romantic, and it is evident that his sympathies side with the poetic school, although he feels a certain obligation to write in the modern idiom. Fortunately, his temperament is irresponsible, and his music is charged with genuine emotion. There are passages in this symphony that are in the same vein as his memorable "Adagio for Strings," and it is in these moments that one recognizes and applauds his talent. He has individuality, and if he follows its guidance, he may write great music.

Khachaturyan's dances are picturesque, piquant and pleasing. They remind one of the Oriental color previously used by Borodin, Ippolitov and Rimski, yet the application is fresh and engaging. There are new tricks of instrumentation, unexpected shifts in tonality, and devious approaches to startling denouements. The audience liked the style so much that Dr. Kindler repeated the "Dance with the Sabres." There are thirteen dances in the orchestral suite arranged from the ballet material.

Food Subsidies End by June; Prices to Rise

By the United Press

Stabilization Administrator John C. Collet announced last night that nearly all food subsidies will be abolished by next June 30 and that while some food costs will rise, the over-all cost is not expected to increase.

He estimated that the cost of living has risen 3.2 per cent since May, 1943, while food costs have declined 1.5 per cent. In view of this, he added, there must be a "careful synchronization with decreases which already have occurred in food costs and may be expected to occur in prices of nonsubsidized items."

It was revealed elsewhere that Government studies indicate that removal of the payments may result in these increases:

Milk, 1.3 cents a quart; bread, 1 cent a loaf; cheese, 4.8 cents a pound; flour, 8.8 cents per 10 pounds; two top grades of beef, 1 cent a pound; pork, 4.4 cents a pound, grapefruit juice, 2.6 cents for No. 2 can; prunes, 4.2 cents a pound; and raisings, 6.2 cents a pound.

Outlines Schedule

Butter prices were increased 5 and 6 cents a pound November 1 when the Federal subsidy was abolished.

Collet outlined this schedule for the end of the subsidies:

Canned grapefruit juice, which has cost six million dollars a year—the subsidy expires automatically with the selling of the 1944-45 crop and will not be renewed.

Vegetable shortening, costing about one million dollars—to end not later than December 31.

Cheese, costing about 29 million dollars—to be terminated not later than February 28, 1946.

Pork—Rollback subsidy of $1.30 per 100 pounds to end not later than March 31, 1946. The remaining pork subsidy, now 40 cents per 100 pounds, to end not later than June 30, 1946.

Canned Vegetables

To end not later than the end of the 1945 crop season: canned and frozen vegetables, which have cost about 39 million dollars for civilian sales; dry edible beans, $4,600,000; prunes, $7,400,000 and raisins, $14,200,000.

To be terminated not later than June 30, 1946; payments to dairy farmers, costing about $534,000,000; regional fluid milk subsidy, (costs not available) feeder cattle (cost no available), beef, 40 million dollars; sheep and lambs, 30 million dollars, and flour, 190 million dollars.

"The Government will take all practical steps to prevent windfall inventory profits that might occur as a result of price increases when subsidies are withdrawn," Collet said. Such procedure was followed in the case of butter.

Gets Her Captain's Bars

Dallas, Tex. (U.P.)—Capt. Clare Adams has received her double shoulder bars—to become the only member of the Marine women's division with that rank in Texas. Capt. Adams was chosen as one of the original 19 officers of the women's Marines when she was a student at Texas State College for Women, Denton.

Half of the total of canned vegetables and two-thirds of the canned fruits available to civilians in 1944 were preserved at home.

'Wings' Save Flier

Chicago (U.P.)—Second Lieut. Edwin L. Harris, 20, a B-17 navigator in Italy, owes his life to his silver wings. He wrote his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roy E. Harris, Chicago, that on a mission to Odertal, Germany, a piece of flak went through his heavy flying suit and hit his pair of wings. It bounced off the wings and he was unhurt.

During 1944; three million individual workers were placed in farm jobs by the local farm labor offices of the State Agricultural Extension Services.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

FRIENDS OF ATOMIC BOMB Inventor J. Robert Oppenheimer are trying to persuade him to run for Congress from California.

Oppenheimer made a big impression on the Senate Kilgore Committee when he dramatically urged the only defense against atom bombs was world peace, and that atomic energy should become the means of raising living standards the world over.

Fellow scientists say there is need in Congress for an experienced scientist, now that we are entering into the atomic age. All the experts agree no one knows atomic power better than Oppenheimer.

Friends also point out that 30 learned men were elected to the French Chamber of Deputies in the recent election; that 70 scientists are being voted members of the Supreme Soviet; that A. N. Back, one of the world's greatest biochemists, is vice president of the Supreme Soviet; and that Juan Negrin, former Premier of Spain, was a professor of physiology.

GIs Keep Out

AMERICAN SOLDIERS taking a few days off to see the sights of Japan recently, drove toward Mount Fuji, one of the most historic and beautiful spots in Japan. But when they entered the area around the base of the mountain, they found it "off limits" for all United States Army personnel.

Investigation found that the boundary between the United States Sixth Army Command and the Eighth Army runs near Fujiyama, and the Sixth Army Command declared its area—which includes Mount Fuji—off limits, in order to keep the Eighth Army out.

Meanwhile, in nearby Miyanoshita is one of the most beautiful hotels in Japan. There live the former German Ambassador, members of his staff, the cabinet of the puppet Filipino government which collaborated with Japan, and a collection of other Axis diplomats. They are interned—but in one of the most luxurious and beautiful resort spots of Japan.

However, American GIs who fought from New Guinea to Okinawa may not enter this beautiful resort area.

Atom Debate

Last week's closed-door session of the House Military Affairs Committee was one of the hottest. It involved the atom bomb.

Hard-hitting Representatives Chet Holifield of Los Angeles and John Sparkman of Huntsville, Ala., had managed during the previous week to win committee approval for several amendments liberalizing the atom-control bill. One provided that administrative power over the bomb should rest with the atomic commission, rather than with an Army-controlled administrator.

Proposed but not adopted was another amendment to cut the size of the commission from nine to seven and make each member a full-time atomic energy commissioner instead of a $1-a-year man whose chief loyalties would be to the private company paying his salary. Chairman May limited secret debate on the latter amendment to half an hour, during which Sparkman and Holifield did their best—even though facing a solid lineup of Republicans.

In addition, three Democrats also opposed the amendment—Carl Durham of North Carolina, Cliff Davis of Tennessee, and Bob Sikes of Florida. They were fearful that a $15,000 job as commissioner would not attract the best possible men. Durham, incidentally, is sold on the idea of having men prominent in private industry or education serve the Government in consultative capacities.

$1-a-Year Men

"ONE OF THE FINEST and most respected men we had in Washington throughout the war period," Durham argued, "is Dr. Frank Graham, president of the University of North Carolina. Dr. Graham would not have come here for a full-time job on the War Labor Board or anywhere else, and we would have lost his extremely valuable services."

Sparkman pointed out that the university had called Graham back to North Carolina, but Durham stuck to his guns.

"For the length of time he was able to serve here, the Government benefited," he replied. "If it had not been for the part-time arrangement, we would not have had him here at all."

Davis of Tennessee insisted during the secret debate that better men would be available on the $1-a-year basis.

"You set this up as a full-time commission with a $15,000 salary and every lame-duck in Washington will be coming around trying to get an appointment. This commission is too important for political appointees," he said.

But Alabama's Sparkman stood pat.

"What you will get," he warned, "is a commission of members who fly in from New York or Chicago once or twice a month to sign a pile of papers the administrator has drawn up for them. You're really handing atomic authority back to an Army administrator if you defeat this amendment."

Sparkman also spoke at length of the importance of having commissioners with no loyalties to private companies—men dependent on no one and determined to guard the interest of the American people.

Leader of GOP opposition was Charles Elston of Ohio, who objected most strenuously to letting Truman get a chance at filling another group of high-paid jobs.

"Are all members to be from one party?" he asked.

Sparkman answered Elston's further charge that a new bureaucracy would be created by pointing out that if the committee were to vote for a single administrator it would create one of the most powerful bureaucratic jobs in all Washington.

But his arguments were of no avail; the vote against his amendment was 12 to 6.

Army Hoards Doctors

WHILE CIVILIAN AREAS are crying for doctors, Gen. Norman Kirk, surgeon general of the Army, continues to keep doctors and nurses doing next to nothing. Here are the facts regarding a Seventh Army evacuation hospital in Germany:

Though it has a capacity of 400 patients, the hospital averages only 64 patients daily. But it keeps 276 doctors, nurses, and enlisted men hanging around to care for these 64 patients.

For each 10 patients there are four doctors, five nurses, and 32 enlisted men—all getting into each other's way.

Average cost of taking care of these 64 patients is $45,471.21 a month. Based only on pay and rations for hospital personnel, one patient costs the taxpayer $23.68 a day.

It actually costs six times more to handle a patient today in peace than it did during combat. This is because so many doctors and nurses have to sit around doing nothing. They would much rather come home.

Meanwhile, Surgeon General Kirk maintains 18 evacuation hospitals in the Seventh Army alone, plus 13 field hospitals, plus 5 station hospitals, 2 convalescent hospitals, and 3 general hospitals.

Note—In some parts of the Pacific, the situation is just as bad or worse.

Truman Asked To End Curb on Credit Buying

New York, Nov. 8 (AP).—The Retail Credit Institute of America, representing more than 1000 retail merchants in 44 States, asked President Truman today for an immediate end to exisiting curbs on instalment buying.

The private trade and research association said continuation of consumer credit regulations under the Government's regulation would "onopolize consumer credit into the channels of big business and bank-ink and destroy thousands of little merchants" in the Nation

After a two-day meeting of institute representatives from 18 States and Canada, the organization adopted a petition to the chief executive arguing that the regulation was strictly a war time measure and should be lifted with the end of hostilities.

"Continued restrictions will force millions of middle and lower income families to cash their Government bonds and savings to enable them to buy the things they need," the petition stated.

"They will work great and needless hardship on millions of returning veterans and their families. These Americans lack adequate cash to reequip their homes evet on the simplest plan and to rehabilitate themselves for civilian life."

The appeal also stated that continuance of the regulation would prevent millions of displaced war-workers from purchasing necessary equipment when reemployed in a different environment.

"Millions of people who have never enjoyed so-called 'wartime income' will be deprived of the opportunity of maintaining a progressive standard of living," it added.

The institute said existing regulations established in wartime required consumers to pay cash or make down payments on such articles as furniture, refrigerators, washing machines, radios, jewelry and clothing—with the balance paid within 12 months.

Although the institute has urged an end to the regulation, several other retailing, banking and trade association groups have from time to time expressed a divided opinion among their ranks as to whether or not the curb should be lifted immediately.

Atomic Energy Bill

Its Omissions; A Communication

I have not seen any statement of the failures of the War Department atomic energy bill (introduced by Senator Johnson and Congressman May) to give protection against criminal use of atomic weapons. There are the following nine omissions in the bill.

1. There is no prohibition on buying, selling or possessing atomic arms for war or violence, such as atomic bombs, explosives, missiles and weapons.

2. There is no prohibition on buying, selling or possessing possible end products of experiment or final ingredients for such areas.

3. The declared policy of the United States and the "general authority" of the commission and administrator do not include control of such arms. None of the terms "atomic bombs," "explosives" or "atomic energy weapons" occur in the bill.

4. The bill deals substantially with thorium and the uranium group of elements. Unless and until the commission orders other substances included in this group, there is no prohibition on using such substances to make, buy, sell, possess, import or export atomic arms.

5. There is no provision to compel persons to disclose such use.

6. There are no adequate provisions to discover secret production of atomic arms or of any elements or substances for atomic energy use or to discover other violations of the commission's orders.

7. There is a special penalty for disclosing information or material "to jeopardize the interests of the United States to anyone who is not entitled to receive it" but none for disclosure to a coworker who would use it against such interests.

8. There is no special penalty for disclosing such information or matter with harmful purposes against friendly foreign countries.

9. There is no express provision against or penalty for buying, selling or possessing atomic arms for use against the United States or any other country.

The bill does not safeguard our citizens against atomic weapons anywhere nearly as well as New York laws do against pistols. Nor as the Volstead prohibition act "protected" us against whisky. And these laws are and were repeatedly violated.

Against atomic dangers, still greater care needs to be taken. Domestic or international gangsters might give huge bribes to get bombs for use in their own or other countries.

Our law should, if possible, be a model for other governments to consider in their legislation.

Mexico and U. S. Sign Treaty For Divided Use of Rivers

Mexico and the United States yesterday formally signed a treaty apportioning the waters of the Rio Grande, Colorado and Tia Juana rivers.

Secretary of State Byrnes signed the protocol of exchange and supplementary documents for the United States and Ambassador Antonio Espinosa de los Monteros for Mexico in a ceremony at the State Department.

In a brief statement Secretary Byrnes called the treaty "a historic milestone in the annals of the cordial relations between Mexico and the United States."

The Mexican ambassador said the two countries had evolved "a model formula for neighborliness" in this treaty and had taken "the final step in the long road toward the efficient utilization of our common streams.

"The betterment of living conditions in these river basins and the enhancement of their resources are the finest monument our countries can consecrate to the ideal of international cooperation."

The Ambassador emphasized that "this cooperative endeavor attained success in the dark days in which the world, confronted by the tragic spectacle of war, seemed to have lost faith and hope in international cooperation for constructive purposes."

Both the United States and the Mexican Senates ratified the treaty several months ago after lengthy debate and negotiation.

Bond rallies will be held for 1600 students of Armstrong High School at 9:45 a. m. today in the school auditorium, and for 900 students at Eliot Junior High Schoo lat 2:45 p. m. today.

"The Victory Loan in an important sense is a vote of confidence in ourselves. It is a home-front test of the personal value each of us places upon victory. Beyond duty and obligation, the Victory Loan gives us a practical way to show our appreciation and desire for continuance of this great bond-saving system which permits us to put aside, at generous interest, funds for our future needs.

"In subscribing to the Victory Loan to our fullest ability to save we are assisting our Government and fighting inflation. My confidence in the American people assures me that the Victory Loan will be over-subscribed."

At a double-header rally in the Interior Department Auditorium yesterday, Federal Works Agency employes were asked to meet a $642,232 quota. Gen. Jacob L. Devers, commanding officer of the Army Ground Forces, was guest speaker.

Bowles Told To Delay Auto Price Ceilings

By the Associated Press

A congressional committee demanded yesterday that OPA refrain from setting automobile price ceilings until "all the facts" were investigated.

The demand, submitted by the House Small Business Committee to OPA Administrator Chester Bowles, came in the form of a resolution after a spokesman for the car sales industry asserted that proposed OPA reductions in established dealer discounts were "most unfair."

Chairman Patman (D., Tex.) said Bowles agreed later to comply with the committee's request.

The committee's resolution was adopted unanimously after members had generally described the statement of the spokesman, W. L. Mallon, president of the National Automobile Dealers Association, as "convincing."

Snyder to Investigate

Reconversion Director John W. Snyder, testifying before the House Planning Committee, also declared he personally would look into the auto price situation before OPA issued any ceiling order.

Mallon told the Small Business Committee that the dealer discount is the long-established mark-up which dealers are allowed by the manufacturer to put on new cars.

The discount, Mallon said, has averaged about 24 per cent on each car. Under the proposed OPA reductions, he said, the discount "might be cut as much as 50 per cent."

He described the OPA as feeling that the cuts are necessary to help absorb increased cost of new-car production. The OPA stand was reached, he asserts, "without any true appreciation of the factors involved."

If the proposed cut is permitted, he said, dealers' gross earnings would be halved and permit an average earnings of "only about ½ of 1 per cent."

Wants Rate Kept

Mallon proposed what he termed a "simple way" to meet the situation:

"Permit the dealer discount rate to remain on the time-proven present level."

Dealers, he said, are "most desirous" that no change be made in their discount "until it can be proven publicly and absolutely that any suggested changes are justified."

Senator Butler (R., Nebr.), one of the 325 Congressmen who asked that their names be included in the record of the hearing, said in a statement that "Congress never intended OPA should issue regulations doing away with the long-established discounts."

He asserted he would do "everything possible" to restrain the OPA in "this bold attempt to exceed its authority."

Six Per Cent Increase In Ford Price Reported

Detroit, Nov. 8 (AP).—The Detroit News said today that, under the OPA pricing formula, prices of new Ford cars will rise 6 per cent, plus $30 allowance for "improvements," and Studebaker prices will go up 12 per cent.

By improvements, it explained, is meant a higher horsepower motor.

The News said its information came from an OPA source.

The Gallup Poll

Army-Navy Merger Favored By Voters Familiar With Issue

By George Gallup

Director of American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 8.—American voters who have heard or read about the proposed unification of the War and Navy Departments favor the move by a substantial majority, a public opinion survey finds.

Approximately half of the voting population has heard or read enough on the subject to be able to tell what the term "unified command" means, and among that group three times as many favor the merger proposal as oppose it.

In Washington the issue of unification is charged with high controversy, important officials of the Navy Department being opposed to such a step while top officials of the War Department favor it. Both sides have given lengthy testimony before a congressional committee.

Further discussion and debate will undoubtedly have its effect upon public sentiment, but at this stage in the discussion the proponents of the measure seem to have substantial support from people who are in some degree familiar with the issue.

The survey was conducted on the following questions:

Will you tell me what your understanding is of the term "unified command" for the armed forces of the United States?

The results to this question showed that 52 per cent had a reasonably correct idea, while 48 per cent either said they did not know or gave answers that fell wide of the mark.

The group indicating some knowledge of the matter was asked:

Do you approve or disapprove of a unified command for the armed forces of this country?

The vote of this informed group:

Approve	64%
Disapprove	23
No opinion	13

While the issue of a merger has many technical and administrative aspects, the opinion of the man in the street on the proposal is of vital importance for two reasons—it is the people who have to support the Army and Navy by taxation; and the security of the Nation, by whatever means, is a matter of paramount importance to all citizens. In any case, whatever decision is reached must eventually meet with the acceptance of the people.

The better educated and better informed citizens throughout the country tend to be the most in favor of the unification idea. People with a college education are not only most likely to have an understanding of what the term unified command means, but also are for the merger by a higher ratio than other groups.

Vote on Merger by Education

	Approve	Disapprove	No Op.

R.-M. Expands Plans For Melton Memorial

Front Royal, Va., Nov. 8 (Spl.).—In his annual report to the Alumni Association of Randolph-Macon Academy, Col. John C. Boggs, principal, made public the details of the war memorial fund drive which was begun about six weeks ago as a part of the $50,000 Melton Memorial Alumni HaH campaign.

This latest step in the program to erect an alumni memorial to the late Prof. Charles L. Melton, for 35 years associated with the academy as teacher and principal, is an outgrowth of the desire on the part of the Alumni Association to honor also the nearly 850 academy alumni in the armed forces and to pay fitting tribute to the 32 R.-M. A. graduates who have been killed in action.

Addition of the War Memorial Room to the plans for Melton Hall, Colonel Boggs stated, have necessitated an increased in the proposed cost of the building.

In Virginia

The result of the Virginia election is significant only as a sort of footnote to what happened Tuesday in New York and Detroit. That is to say, it is another proof, if one were needed, that the old-fashioned party machines are by no means obsolete, and that many of them have only been waiting for a cooling of the political temperature before quietly resuming their control. To be sure, the political climate in Virginia has been somewhat different from that in the large industrial cities, where the old-fashioned party machines organized on the basis of patronage and personal loyalties have been threatened by a new kind of machine like the Political Action Committee of the CIO, organized on the basis of economic self-interest. In Virginia, of course, the franchise is limited by the poll tax and other devices, and for this and other reasons, even in the depression and war years, the Statewide domination of the Byrd organization has never been seriously threatened.

On Tuesday the organization triumphed as completely and almost as easily as it had triumphed over independent Democratic opposition in the primaries. Lieut. Gov. William A. Tuck, an organization wheelhorse, won the governorship by what appears to have been a 2 to 1 margin over the combined votes for his Republican and independent opponents. Lewis Preston Collins won the lieutenant governorship almost as easily. Here it had been anticipated the race would be much tighter, because of the bitter intraorganization contests between Collins and Charles R. Fenwick of Arlington. The primary contest between them was close and hot; the returns showed that Fenwick had been defeated by a few hundred votes, but the court directed that Collins' name be placed on the ticket because of certain alleged voting "irregularities" in Wyse County. There was some talk, at least by Republicans, that Fenwick's disgruntled followers would avenge him by cutting Collins' name in the general election, but in machine politics party loyalty and self-interest usually prevail in these cases, and so it was in Virginia.

Thus Virginia's prospect of becoming a two-party State appears as remote as ever. Tuesday's voting appears to have been relatively light. Less than 200,000 of the 350,000 qualified voters bothered to cast their votes. Thus in Virginia as in New York City there were some signs that after all the excitements of the past few years, many Americans are reverting to their formerly characteristic political apathy, and this, of course, is one of the main reasons for the survival and apparent indestructibility of political machines.

Scarce Minerals

That arch conservator, Harold L. Ickes, has issued a timely warning that the United States now has "less than a 35-year peacetime supply of 21 minerals." Although this warning was issued by Mr. Ickes unofficially, via a magazine article, in his capacity as a free-lance writer, it carries a great deal of authority arising out of the close association he is known to maintain with the Secretary of the Interior. Mr. Ickes is in a position to know whereof he speaks. "We no longer deserve to be listed with Russia and the British Empire as one of the 'have' nations of the world," he says. "We should be listed with the 'have nots,' such as Germany and Japan."

Stockpiling is the remedy he recommends—a cause which has long appealed to this newspaper. It is the only remedy open to a nation which has come near to the exhaustion of its own resources. Stockpiling means importing. This is something which it should not be difficult for the United States to do. We are in the process of negotiating loans to some of the "have" countries—Britain and the Soviet Union, for instance—and their repayment problems would be greatly facilitated by our acceptance of tungsten, antimony, chromium, tin, oil and other metals and minerals in exchange for the goods they wish to purchase here with the credits granted to them. Mr. Ickes thus advances a much more enlightened view of our foreign trade relationships in the postwar period than that set forth on the same day by Mr. Bernard Baruch.

One of the scarce minerals enumerated by Mr. Ickes, petroleum, can be secured to the United States without going quite so far afield. Although the proven petroleum reserves in the uplands of this country are estimated to be sufficient for no more than another 14 years of consumption at present rates, a good deal of petroleum is known to be available under the submerged land off the coasts of California and Texas. Mr. Ickes himself, as Secretary of the Interior, has been the instigator of a suit, now before the Supreme Court, claiming these underwater resources for the Federal Government. If he wins this suit—and if Congress can be prevailed upon to refrain from giving away the birthright of the American people—one of our most serious shortages will be substantially eased.

We can no longer afford to be prodigal with oil, or with any of the strategic minerals. We must husband them as among the primary sources of American military and industrial power. Here is a "sacred trust" far more worthy of that phrase than the atomic "secret."

30 Per Cent

To disgruntled labor in the mass production industries 30 per cent is rapidly becoming a symbol as well as the pay raise to which it thinks it is entitled. The 30 per cent would be added to the hourly rate. In this way labor would be compensated for the loss in take-home pay as a result of the lapse of overtime. Perhaps Walter P. Reuther, vice president of the United Automobile Workers, is the most articulate spokesman of the 30 per cent claim. He bases it upon the increase in labor productivity during the war, which, he says, has for the most part been acquired by employers in the form of profits. He is the spearhead of a new theory of labor demands based upon savings arising from technological improvement. The strong profit and reserve position of industry is cited by way of proof that these savings have been enough to warrant the raise.

On the employers' side the 30 per cent is rejected out-of-hand. It is admitted that productivity has increased rapidly in the war industries. But the savings resulting therefrom have not been made in all industries, especially in those making civilian goods. Nor, with war industries in process of shift to peacetime output, is it possible to say that the savings will be carried over. To be sure, some of the firms are in good financial shape for reconversion. But it would be uneconomic and eventually impossible to use capital instead of income in meeting current charges. Moreover, savings due to better productivity should in justice be shared—with fellow workers in other industries, including the farmers, in the form of lower prices, and with stockholders.

So the battle goes on, with neither side yielding on the premises, and with both sides disputing the other's statistics. It has been going on so long that, as we say, on the labor side the 30 per cent has become a symbol as well as a claim.

Now symbols are apt to become the refuge of stubborn men. They hold off common sense, let alone compromise. This particular symbol is the shadow over the Labor-Management Conference, the bogey which is stalling reconversion and promoting inflation. The first thing to do, therefore, is to bring this hurtful symbol down to earth and make it manageable in terms of action. Let the mass production industries withdraw their flat negative to the 30 per cent claim. Tell the workers that within the framework of the President's statement of last week, they would pay part of the claim now, and review the case for the remainder of the claim either six months from date, or sooner if price control has been lifted in the meantime. There would then be some data in terms of higher productivity which would allow the situation to be appraised for retroactive application. Surely this would be fair enough to warrant a cessation of industrial strife.

If we made the symbol workable in this way, it would be the best fillip we can think of for the success of the Labor-Management Conference in laying down procedures for collective bargaining. It would allow industry time to turn around. The workers would be put on their mettle actually to demonstrate that the miracle in war production could be matched in peace. The lost ground in reconversion's race against inflation would be made up. Symbols are of value only as they are made to serve the community, when they are dynamic instead of static.

Delegate's Powers

The action taken by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee with regard to the powers of the United States representative on the Security Council goes a long way to end whatever faint doubts may have remained of this country's intention to play a vital role in the United Nations. The committee has approved a measure making the American representative on the Council responsible only to the President. At the same time the bill provides that any agreement attained by the Chief Executive with other nations regarding the size and possible employment of the emergency force to be placed at the Security Council's disposal for possible use against an aggressor should be subject to congressional approval.

This arrangement will not fully satisfy the extreme isolationists who, whether they voted for the Charter or not, have no desire to see the United Nations become a living force. In fact, their original plan was to approve the Charter, since it was politically inexpedient to oppose it in view of the overwhelming public sentiment in favor of that document, but to hamstring American participation by making every action taken by the American delegate subject to the Senate's ratification. But it is most unlikely that the great majority of the Senate will take that view. The Foreign Relations Committee's bill safeguards every proper American interest while, at the same time giving the Government and the American delegate on the Council that freedom of action without which his participation in the discussions of that body would be meaningless. In view of the situation brought into being by the atomic bomb, the chief criticism of the Council's powers is not that it infringes national sovereignty but that, because of the veto power, it does not infringe on it enough.

Consistency

Consistency is a jewel, but of late it has become pretty tarnished in our foreign policy. Consider the British-American negotiations in the light of our "colonial" policy. With presidential approval Senator Tydings introduced a bill last May which would permit the Puerto Ricans to decide by referendum vote whether they desired independence, statehood or some form of dominion status. The bill also provided that, whatever the form of government chosen, free trade relationships would be maintained between the island and the United States except for tariffs imposed by mutual consent. It specifically declared that the importation of Puerto Rican sugar into this country should continue "on a basis not more restrictive in principle than that which has prevailed during the last five years in which a quota was imposed under United States law."

A few days ago Senator Tydings introduced another bill, this time for the rehabilitation of the Philippine Islands, permitting establishment of preferential tariff rates and duty-free quotas on a specified list of articles, under the terms of an executive agreement to be authorized between the President of the United States and the President of the Philippines. The bill provides also for the duty-free admission of 850,000 tons of Philippine sugars and the allocation of quotas among island mills that were exporting to the United States in 1940.

Undoubtedly the United States is under obligation to see that Puerto Rico and the Philippines do not pay too great an economic price for political independence. Special agreements and concessions are undoubtedly justified to assist them to raise living standards. But it is at the same time necessary to view specific concessions in relation to long-range policies and objectives and to consider the effect of such concessions upon other countries. More particularly, we shall run the risk once again of being inconsistent in our foreign policy. At the moment we are negotiating with the British for the abandonment of their trade preferences and their empire preferences. Talking one way and acting another is not the way to behave for a great power anxious to keep world goodwill.

Messy Government

The chaos in our District government could not have been illustrated better than by the way the taxicab drivers capitalized the transit tieup. They went to see Mr. Jennings Randolph, chairman of the House District Committee, and offered to withdraw the threat of a sympathetic walkout. Mr. Randolph allowed himself to be intimidated, and in return for the drivers' pledge not to complete the work of the trolley and bus drivers in paralyzing the work of the Federal Government, promised to speed up hearings on five demands of the taxicab drivers.

The right of Mr. Randolph so to take matters in his own hands is not in question. We have a Public Utilities Commission which should be the regulatory body for the taxicabs, but, because of congressional anxiety to retain control of the fares of the taxis they use, it has no real authority to regulate the local industry. The result is that the taxicab drivers, like the rest of us, are given the runaround in congressional exercise of the local governing function. For it is difficult for Congress to pay much notice to the local taxis when they have such things to attend to as the regulation of the universe. The whole incident throws a glaring light upon our unfortunate situation as the city which has to depend upon Congress for its government and which has to put up with this kind of irresponsibility in that government.

Statecraft

The announcement that the Marines are being withdrawn from China produced the following colloquy at Secretary Byrnes' Thursday press conference:

Correspondent: Was the decision one in which the State Department took a part?

Secretary Byrnes: No, that is purely a military matter.

Correspondent: Is the decision to send a military mission to China State Department business?

Secretary Byrnes: No, that's a War Department question.

Why didn't somebody ask Secretary Byrnes: Don't you know that the war is over?

Spray, with fine separate touch,
under the gauge of the sun lie banked and banded and bunched.

Salt, with far-wandering smell,
Shells, with kelp-winding hair turn in green waves and are flung slant, on the sea-dampened air.

Time, and the drifting of gulls
White on the fringe of this shore, dip of the deep and the strong sweep of a pebble-bright floor.

Internal Controls

By Ernest Lindley

Atomic Legislation

THE MAJORITY report of the House Military Affairs Committee should dispose finally of the most important misunderstandings which have befogged discussion of the May-Johnson bill. This bill deals exclusively with internal controls over atomic energy. As the committee report states:

"The bill sets down no policy and is intended to set down no policy concerning international control or lack of control of atomic energy. There is no provision in the bill which will prevent or hinder the United States from adopting any international policy which is hereafter deemed proper. It is entirely neutral on the international issues with which so many people are now concerned."

The most serious opposition to the May-Johnson bill has been based on the assumption that the bill would or should set a pattern for the international control of atomic energy. That was never its purpose. Both the original bill and the revised version reported by the committee deal exclusively with domestic controls.

THE DECISION to draw a line between internal and international controls was made by President Truman on the advice of his interim committee on atomic energy, which includes Dr. Vannevar Bush, head of the office of scientific research and development, and Dr. James B. Conant, president of Harvard, who shared with Dr. Bush the highest responsibilities for our wartime military research, including the atomic bomb project. The interim committee was advised by other high-ranking scientists of the atomic bomb project.

The distinction between internal and international controls is logical and practical. Internal controls are absolutely necessary, no matter what international policy may be proposed or followed by the United States. They are needed to protect the health and life of American citizens. They are needed to conserve the Nation's priceless investment in atomic research and development and to make it possible for research and development to be carried forward.

The bill was amended in committee to meet two objections raised by some of the scientists. It now invests more authority in the part-time nine-man atomic energy commission than in the full-time administrator for the commission. Some of the scientists feared that the administrator would be an Army man—presumably General Groves. The bill also has been revised to permit uncontrolled private research which does not involve the release of atomic energy in dangerous amounts and to permit, without fear of penalty, exchange of information by scientists engaged in such private research.

The purpose in making service on the atomic energy commission part time is to make it possible for scientists, engineers, industrialists and other civilians of the highest rank to serve. An alternative proposal is to vest the top authority in a Cabinet committee. This would be even more of a part-time arrangement. Probably the Cabinet members would delegate the work to subordinates.

THERE ARE STILL other ways in which the governing authority for atomic energy in the United States might be set up. But, no matter how it was set up, it would need very broad authority. It is hard to see how the public interest could be protected at this stage with much less authority than is granted under the May bill.

Over the weekend, President Truman is taking up questions of international control with Prime Ministers Attlee and King. There should be, as soon as possible, a further definition of American or joint United States-British-Canadian policy with respect to the international controls over atomic energy. But the actual setting up of international controls will require at best many months, perhaps years. The whole attempt might fail. There is no assurance that all other nations will cooperate in setting up effective international controls.

But domestic legislation concerning atomic energy is needed now. It is needed, among other reasons, to prevent the disintegration of the atomic energy organization—from scientists down to workers in the plants in Washington and Tennessee—built up during the war. The report of the House Military Affairs Committee should help to make clear the valid distinction between internal and international controls and so to expedite action on the former.

'Nursery Propaganda'

It is easy to ridicule the censorship of German fairy tales, but somehow it doesn't seem so funny to me. I have a long memory and I remember many articles in your same paper, years back, telling us that the Germans had used their fairy tales to disseminate racial propaganda (making all the villians look like Jews with big noses, etc.). I think, very likely, the British are doing a good job indeed.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Local And National Elections

THE TEMPTATION always is to read great national significance into mid-term elections such as the mayoralty contests held in important cities around the country. Actually, it is a long way to 1948, and the few limp straws tossed into the political wind would seem to have very limited meaning.

With the resounding victory of Mayor-elect O'Dwyer, the political referees are inclined to count Governor Dewey out of the national picture. In his familiar role of Sir Galahad, Dewey rushed into the mayoralty election with charges that were sensational to the point of irresponsibility.

What is more important, politically speaking, no one seemed to pay the slightest attention. The voters overwhelmed a weak Republican candidate and Mayor LaGuardia's protege, Newbold Morris, a third party entry in the cause of good government.

The march of world events has been such that Dewey has inevitably found it difficult or impossible to keep his name and his reputation before the public. The effort to make it seem that he had nobly forsworn victory in 1944 by refusing to disclose that Jap secret codes were broken before Pearl Harbor backfired heavily.

THE PRECEDENT in the Republican Party against renominating a defeated candidate is strong. Dewey is now 43 years old and military records, out of either World War I or II, are likely to be important political assets in view of the heavy veterans' vote.

Moreover, a candidate still in uniform is setting out to win the nomination. Capt. Harold Stassen, recnetly promoted and soon to be returned to civilian life, is a formidable contender.

Stassen, who made his political start as Governor of Minnesota, is bound to become a figure around whom many hopes will center. As a delegate to the United Nations Conference at San Francisco, he increased his reputation.

He has a strong appeal for the independent voter who tended to follow Roosevelt because of his stand on foreign policy. While this is something of a handicap for Stassen among the panjandrums of the Republican Party, it is just possible that after four defeats they will realize that they must take a man who can talk not to the faithful regulars alone, but to the middle band of voters without strong party ties.

The wonder is that men of Stassen's stature still want to be President. We give our public figures an awful beating. And, what is more, 99 per cent of the time we calmly ignore all responsibility for public office and then grouse like anything when we find the man in the governor's chair or the mayor's office is not another George Washington.

THAT IS THE moral of a very funny political play now showing here on its way to Broadway. Howard Lindsay and Russell Crouse have portrayed in "State of the Union" the complications in the life of a Willkie-like industrialist who is persuaded by hard-boiled Republican politicoes that he has a chance for the nomination. As the boss and chief fixer says, the reason the people don't get to pick a President is because the people are too lazy to vote in the primaries, leaving such sordid details to the professionals.

In New York they had the lightest registration since 1929. A fraction of the voters named the man who has the unenviable task of trying to keep the vast and torpid city orderly and solvent. There are many gorgeous failures in that line and a few rare successes, such as that of the fierce little temperament who is now to retire to what can certainly never be private life.

In Detroit the voters turned out in unprecedented numbers, stirred by the candidacy of Richard Frankensteen of the CIO's United Automobile Workers. The wonder seems to be not that he was defeated by the veteran Mayor Jeffries, but that he got as many votes as he did. During the election campaign, Frankensteen tried to settls a wildcat strike and was booed off the platform—hardly a demonstration of labor responsibility or solidarity.

There is evidence that Americans today would like some plain speaking. What they are getting, for the most part, is politics as usual.

Wage Increases

Roger Babson, on November 5, advises workers: "Quit squabbling about wages and hours . . . Think of what is going to happen a year or two hence. When you were last out of employment, it was bad enough not to have a pay envelope, but if the proposed wage increases are granted, you may be faced not only with no pay envelope, but with higher living costs."

Mr. Babson bases that advice upon his prediction that "a great deal of unemployment will exist in this country" once the special conditions of the reconversion period have ended.

America is squarely up against the problem that industry, if it works at full capacity and employs all persons seeking work, will produce no less than 186 billion dollars worth of goods and services—and perhaps more. In order to consume this production, we will have to have a higher level of consumer purchasing power than ever before. Only a high monetary income for the millions of ordinary citizens who constitute industry's market can give rise to this purchasing power.

If these working citizens do not actively demand higher real incomes to match industry's prospective output, but follow Mr. Babson's advice, the depression Mr. Babson predicts will inevitably occur.

The path to postwar prosperity will never be found through Mr. Babson's "storm cellar" psychology. The problem of learning how to consume the vast output that our industry can produce at full capacity is not insoluble—so long as Americans are not yet ready to accept the sound advice of quiescently yielding to depression.

Whom To Feed?

So it seems that we are going to have to send fuel and food to Germany—for our own security. A curious paradox! Because the Germans are defeated and incapable of taking care of themselves, we will have to help them—or they may revolt. But the people in the liberated countries have no one to revolt against, except the governments of their own choice, if they spend another winter with practically no fuel, fat or meat. Their sufferings do not endanger our security directly, because they govern themselves. Misery will, no doubt, unite the Germans in common hatred of the occupying forces who, quite naturally, they will hold responsible for their plight. In other words, their nationalism will be strengthened. But in the liberated countries, the result of misery and suffering is bound to be civil discord, and the weakening of already overtaxed governments. Do we want that, or shall we blindly forget the more serious because of the most obvious danger?

Georgian Speaks

In April Franklin Delano Roosevelt passed into history at Warm Springs, among us here in Georgia, his second home. The eyes of the world were suddenly focused on this State.

Six months later his wife, Eleanor Roosevelt, herself a great woman and a public figure, was invited to return to Georgia by the State's youth section of the Democratic Party which her husband had led for more than 12 years. Two young men, officials of this organization, thereupon resigned in protest of her scheduled appearance here, in protest of her views on the brotherhood of man, views which conform to this Nation's religious pronouncements, its constitutional pronouncements, and to the democratic principles for which the confreres of these young men have spilled their blood on foreign soil. For fear of embarrassing the State, Mrs. Roosevelt has now withdrawn her acceptance of the invitation to return to Georgia.

Fame is won in divers ways. The names of these young men mean little, but their act will probably go down in history, to the shame of Georgia and its people.

With others in my native State I hang my head.

Tenants' League

What Washington needs is a Tenants' League for protection against fantastic room and "apartment" rents and to advocate big-scale Government housing. "Furnished apartments" and houses do not seem to come under rent control, and hence audacious rentals are demanded.

But the feature that concerns tens of thousands harassed roomers in this city is the triple imposition of fake ceiling room rents, denial of grill privileges for a hurried breakfast bite, and the hands-off policy of the D. C. Rent Control Commission. If your landlady tells you that the "law" will not permit a grill in your room she is simply imposing one more hardship in addition to being untruthful. (You tell her that the license bureau permits electric grills in furnished rooms, which you can easily verify in the D. C. Executive offices.) The D. C. Rent Control Act requires that the landlady post the official room rent schedule in her hallway. Perhaps one in a hundred is posted. By "fake ceiling room rents" I mean that actually the landlord places his own rent ceiling instead of the law basing it on profits over the rent he pays or the assessed valuation, plus interest and taxes if he owns the house. Even allowing him 100 per cent profit over all expenses it would still be a boon to tenants.

Election Returns

By Mark Sullivan

Political Deductions

THE ELECTION returns this week in several large cities have been surveyed by many persons for light on the national political situation, looking to next year's congressional elections and to the presidential election in 1948. Such deductions as can be made are not strongly convincing.

The poor showing by the Republicans in New York City is interpreted by many as forecasting difficulty on the part of Republican Gov. Thomas E. Dewey in getting reelected next year, assuming he tries, which common expectation thinks he will. And this contingency is in turn interpreted as meaning difficulty for Governor Dewey in getting the Republican presidential nomination in 1948, again assuming he wants it.

In all this there are some elements of sound basis. A presidential candidate who is defeated in his first attempt, as Mr. Dewey was last year, is not commonly renominated by his party. The most conspicuous exception, not happy as an augury, was William Jennings Bryan. He, after his first defeat, was twice renominated by the Democrats and again twice defeated. If Governor Dewey is to be renominated by the Republicans in 1948, it must be for strong reasons. Among them, it is practically indispensable that Mr. Dewey be reelected Governor of New York in 1946. To this extent there is validity in the deduction from the poor showing made by the Republicans in the New York City election last Tuesday.

AS TO THE rather overwhelming defeat of a CIO official, Mr. Richard Frankensteen, running for Mayor of Detroit as an avowedly CIO candidate, any deduction which minimizes CIO as a political force would be misleading. The CIO Political Action Committee, standing alone, could hardly carry many local elections, and most certainly could not carry a national eletion. But one of the elements of political acumen on the side of CIO is the fact that their leaders realize from history the futility of third parties in America. The shrewd founders of the CIO Political Action Committee adopted a policy of operating within one of the old parties. The one they choose was the Democratic Party, and though CIO leaders aver that they are equally willing to support Republican candidates who are satisfactory to them, the fact is that CIO operates within the Democratic Party, and by its strength and strategy is very powerful there.

The CIO political action committee is young; it was founded in 1943. Its only experience so far in a national election was in the presidential and congressional elections of 1944. Within a year, it had grown so strong that in the Democratic National Convention of 1944 it came close to nominating Mr. Henry A. Wallace for Vice President, against the opposition of most of the Democratic leaders, including even President Roosevelt. But Mr. Roosevelt's opposition to renomination of Mr. Wallace was a reluctant opposition, taken for the sake of expediency and more or less forced upon him by the other party leaders. Mr. Roosevelt continued friendly to Mr. Wallace, supported his ideas, and appointed him to a Cabinet post. In the 1944 election Mr. Roosevelt had aggressive support by CIO, and CIO had proportionate inuence within the party so long as Mr. Roosevelt was President. After Mr. Truman became President, there was question whether CIO would continue to be powerful within the party. After some eight months of Mr. Truman's presidency, the answer seems to be yes.

UNDOUBTEDLY President Truman and officials of the Democratic Party organization feel obliged to take account of CIO-PAC. As a political group it is rather more thoroughly organized than either of the old party organizations. Without examining the figures, it is probably safe to say that CIO-PAC has a larger personnel of active workers, is more energetic in getting voters to register and go to the polls, and has a larger and more effective publicity staff. With a shrewd sense of the value of words, CIO describes much of its work as "educational." In this activity CIO is able, fertile and voluminous—the number of pieces of literature it put out in the 1944 campaign was approximately 100 million.

The aggressive effectiveness of CIO-PAC is such that the Democratic organization, including President Truman, can hardly ignore its claim to consideration. Nor can the Republicans ignore it. For the issues and pattern of the campaign in the congressional elections next year and the presidential election of 1948 are likely to be determined in considerable part by CIO.

Sheet Shortage

Some weeks ago housewives read with great interest of the millions of bed sheets to be released to the public by the armed services.

They were no doubt released but to the various commissaries only—and they seem plentiful there. Lucky card holders discuss them openly—usually complaining of the quality. Should Army people be the only ones entitled to sheets and a few other still scarce articles?

Three Top Officials Urge Higher Salaries

By Jerry Kluttz

PAY BILL: A splendid case—the best yet—for higher Government salaries was made yesterday at a hearing of the Senate Civil Service Committee, whose members obviously were impressed by the striking testimony. Three top-flight witnesses — Gen. Omar N. Bradley of the Veterans' Administration, and businessmen OPA Administrator Chester Bowles and William Batt, former WPB vice chairman—all came to the identical conclusion for the sake of better Government—higher salaries. The committee will have open hearings again today and Tuesday and Wednesday it will go into executive session in an effort to report out a bill. The chances of favorable Senate action before recess appear to be growing brighter daily.

KLUTTZ

CHALLENGE: The committee was given this blunt warning by General Bradley, who said: "I am fearful the Veterans' Administration might not be able to accomplish satisfactorily its full responsibilities unless salaries are raised." Batt revealed that some of the best people the War Production Board recruited from industry had wanted to remain in Government work but they couldn't afford to at the present salary rates. Bowles told the committee that "there is no room for disagreement on the proposition that Government today is far too important—its responsibilities are far too vital—for us to aim at anything less than the finest and most competent staff for the Federal Government that is possible to secure."

BOWLES suggested three hard-to-answer reasons why top salaries should be lifted: (1) the Government must continue, as it has in wartime, to draw men from industry, labor, agriculture and the professions and this interchange won't be possible in peacetime unless salaries are raised; (2) there isn't enough risk-taking in Government. Mediocre officials are frightened into inactivity. They haven't the imagination and initiative. The Government must have able people who have the gumption to take risks and the judgment to cut their losses and play their winners, and (3) higher salaries will mean better supervision of the low-paid employes. Thousands of Government employes, he said, are constantly demonstrating their devotion and loyalty by putting in long hard hours of honest work over and beyond their normal responsibilities. Bowles went on to say that it was a good old American custom to lampoon and bait Federal officials and employes. In business, he recalled, he heard such stories but he received a far more favorable impression of the high quality of Government people when he joined the service three years ago.

BRADLEY told the committee that a number of the able people he had offered jobs had rejected them because of the low salaries. "We have been," he said, "fortunate in securing the services of an outstanding neuropsychiatrist and an orthopedist who were willing to give up private practice and incomes several times the salaries we are authorized to pay. Relatively few members of the medical profession, however, are able to make such financial sacrifices." Bradley compared the $9800 salary he is permitted to pay his man to handle 16,600,000 insurance policies involving 127 billion dollars with salaries in private insurance firms that range from $50,000 to $125,000. And the private firms all have much less business. Managers of large private hospitals average $15,000, he said, while the highest salary of his 97 managers is $9800.

BATT told of the need of the State Department for competent people—he said several WPB officials would have gone to State if they could have been paid better salaries—and he told how Britain and other foreign countries paid their foreign office officials much better salaries than we do. The Government, he said, finds it most difficult to hold a good man from accepting a better offer in private industry. He should know as he has given his last five years to Government and much of it was spent persuading people to come here and persuading them to stay here once they came. As chairman of the National Planning Association, Batt indorsed a salary of $25,000 for members of Congress. "I'm convinced," he said, "that this bill will have national support."

DIARY NOTES: CCA will have its first open house for Government personnel and training officers today at the National Airport . . . J. Henry Neale is the new general counsel of the Navy Department. He succeeds Patrick H. Hodgson who enters private business . . . Monday is a holiday—the President's orders—but a good many War Department employes, military and civilians, yesterday were told abruptly to report to work as usual. Most employes in the Adjutant General's Office were ordered to work. They were looking forward to a holiday and they don't like it. Holiday work shouldn't be necessary for any large number of employes now. The employes who work will get four hours overtime for their effort. Those who don't work will get a full day's pay.

Bank Fraud Case Echoed In FDIC Suit

Richmond, Va., Nov. 8 (AP).—The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. today filed suit for $47,650.09, with interest and costs, against Duval Quinn Hicks, jr., representative of the estate of William Reeves Gardner, former vice president of the Farmers & Merchants State Bank of Fredericksburg, since liquidated.

Hicks, a Fredericksburg attorney, was recently appointed by Judge Leon M. Bazile in Fredericksburg Circuit Court to represent the estate. The request that an attorney be named to serve as committee for the estate was made by the FDIC to pave the way for the filing of such suit. Hicks is associated in a law firm with W. W. Butzner, who was attorney for Gardner in his trial in the Fredericksburg court where he was convicted of embezzelment of $75,000 from the bank accounts of two dairy companies.

Indicted on 20 Counts

Gardner was indicted by a Federal grand jury here on October 17 on 20 counts charging misapplication of funds from the Fredericksburg bank.

The suit brought by the FDIC charges that on February 3, 1944, Gardner induced the Planters branch of the Fredericksburg bank to advance $47,500 on a 30-day promisory note signed by Kyle M. Weeks. Weeks is one of the nine defendants charged with aiding and abetting Gardner in the misapplication of funds.

The suit further charges that bank examiners, on March 15, "expressed dissatisfaction with the foregoing note" and that two days later Weeks drew a check on the Floyd County bank for $47,737.50 marked payable to "Planters branch" for "note and interest to date." The FDIC contends that Weeks knew he did not have sufficient funds in the Floyd County bank to cover the check, but that he wrote it so that Garner could show it to the bank examiner and thus lead them to believe the note had been duly paid.

Personal Note Unpaid

The suit, which was filed in behalf of the FDIC by Albert V. Bryan of Alexandria, attorney, states that the Floyd County bank protested the check and returned it to the Fredericksburg bank, where Gardner was called upon to personally guarantee the note and to deposit collateral to secure its payment.

On April 4, 1944, Gardner delivered to the Fredericksburg bank his own promisory note for $47,738.89, as collateral for Week's note, the suit contends.

The note was transferred by the Fredericksburg bank to FDIC, the suit alleges, and despite demands made to Gardner for payment in full, only one payment of $88.80 was made, on November 25, 1944.

Arraignment Set

Meanwhile, Federal District Judge Robert N. Pollard has set noon, November 29, for the arraignment of Gardner, accused of misapplication of bank funds totalling $435,660. That date has also been set for the arraignment of nine other persons charged with aiding and abetting in the alleged fraud.

Gardner is serving a seven-year sentence at State Penitentiary imposed on him June 22 by Fredericksburg Circuit Court Judge Leon M. Bazile, after Gardner had pleaded guilty to charges of embezzling $75,000 from the bank accounts of the Embassy Dairy Co. of Washington and the Green Springs Dairy Co. of Baltimore.

A.M.A. Cadet Gets Posthumous Award Of Hero Father

Winchester, Va., Nov. 8 (Spl.).—George F. Miller, jr., a cadet at Augusta Military Academy, has received the Silver Star citation, awarded posthumously to his father, Lieut. Col. George Miller, who was killed January 20, 1845.

The medal was presented by Maj. James Leitner, commander of the Winchester recruiting district. At the same time, the Elks' Medal of Valor was presented to Mrs. George Miller by Howard Cahill, exalted ruler of the local lodge.

The citation accompanying the Silver Star award stated that Lieut. Col. Miller, with one company was pinned down by withering enemy artillery fire, with complete disregard for his own personal safety, went forward, extricated the besieged unit, personally assumed command and while leading his company to its objective was mortally wounded.

Damage Tops $10,000 In Waynesboro Fire

Waynesboro, Va., Nov. 8 (AP).—A fire last night demolished the upper floor of the Blue Ridge Grocery Co., wholesale grocers, here, with the loss estimated at $10,000 to $15,000 to the building alone.

C. W. S. Flinton, owner of the business, who was in Greenville, S. C., at the time of the fire, was unable to determine immediately the extent of damage to warehouse stock which was housed in the large tin building.

The fire began in the elevator shaft of the building.

Election Bet

Carwile Must Shine Shoes Of Landreth

Richmond, Va., Nov. 8 (AP).—State Senator S. Floyd Landreth, defeated Republican candidate for Governor, did win something in the election and is going to collect it.

It's a shoeshine due him from Howard Carwile, defeated independent candidate, who declaimed about the State during the campaign to the effect that he'd shine Landreth's shoes on the steps of the Capitol if he didn't beat Landreth in Danville—which he didn't, by a long way.

Landreth said today he will claim the shoeshine and thinks he may want it ceremoniously administered on the Capitol steps during the coming session of the General Assembly.

Carwile today said he isn't really a good shoe-shiner, that in fact he has never learned to tie neckties or shine shoes. But he'll train for the rites on the Capitol steps in the meantime.

Maj. Davis Missing In Plane Crash

Winchester, Va., Nov. 8 (Spl.).—Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Davis, sr, have been informed by the War Department that their son, Maj. B. F. Davis, is among those missing following a crash landing at sea last Saturday of a Liberator-type transport plane of the Air Transport Command, en route to the United States from Honolulu, Major Davis' wife and a 3-year-old son reside in Baltimore.

Major Davis entered the service in 1941 from the Reserve Officer Corps of VPI, and since, from the time he was sent overseas approximately three years ago, has been attached to the headquarters staff of General MacArthur with G-2, Military Intelligence.

1 Dead, 3 Hurt In Children's Yard Bonfire

Linthicum, Md., Nov 8 (AP).—Judith Allen, 8, died today and her two younger brothers were in serious condition in a Baltimore hospital from burns received from a backyard bonfire, police reported.

George H. Allen, father of the children, also was burned as he attempted to beat out the flames on Judith's dress.

Ferndale police said that the first intimation of the tragedy came when the three children ran screaming to the house.

They said that Judith and her brothers, Kent, 5, and Arnold, 7, apparently built the fire and then poured inflammable cleaning fluid on the embers.

Rogers Is Named To Roads Board

Richmond, Va., Nov. 8 (AP).—Governor Darden today announced the appointment of Howard C. Rogers, member of the House of Delegates from Loudoun County, to fill the unexpired four-year term of the late Emmett H. Poindexter as a member of the State Highway Commission

The new commissioner, who has served before the same body, is a dairyman, flour mill operator, farmer, manufacturer of dairy and poultry feeds and dealer in grain, fertilizer and seeds. He was a member of the Loudoun Board of Supervisors for 20 years, and was elected a member of the House in 1940. He did not file for reelection in this year's contest, however, but did announce his candidacy for the seat left vacant by the death of State Senator Thomas B. Glascock, later withdrawing from the race.

He was born in Hamilton and continues to make that town his home.

Recent newspaper headlines give the shocking news of our 2,000,000 Puerto Rican fellow Americans subjugated to poverty, filth, and ignorance by a small sugar-fisted fascist clique. President Truman has just asked Congress for action to remedy this situation. Here is the first eye-witness account of a horror unbelievable in a civilized world, the whole pitiful plight of our island brothers caught vise-like between dreams of independence and the harsh realities of their own inadequate economy. Md. Hospitals Seek to Qualify Under New Law

Baltimore, Nov. 8 (AP).—More than half of the application blanks sent to the 197 institutions that might be affected by the new hospital licensing law have been filled in and returned to the State Department of Health.

In announcing this Dr. Dean Roberts, chief of the Bureau of Medical Services of the health department and secretary of the advisory board on hospital licensing, outlined progress made under the licensing program, enacted into law at the last regular session of the Legislature.

He said Elizabeth V. Vickers, nursing administrator had been appointed hospital consultant to carry out initial inspections of those institutions affected under the licensing law.

The program is being administered by the Bureau of Medical Services, with a seven-member board headed by Dr. Winford H. Smith, director of the Johns Hopkins Hospital, serving in an advisory capacity in making recommendations and assisting in establishment of minimum standards.

Standards for the several institutional classifications were being drafted, Dr. Roberts explained, and license certificates, to cost $10, would be valid for one-year periods.

He said four general classifications would be observed in granting licenses; General hospitals, specialized hospitals; homes for the aged providing chronic and convalescent care, and rest and nursing homes for chronic or convalescent patients.

Miss Vickers, a native of Preston, Md., will determine whether institutions to be licensed measure up to standards.

A graduate of the Union Memorial Hospital Nursing School, she received her B. S. degree in nursing education at Columbia University.

Search Continues For Nazi Prisoner Who Fled Meade

Baltimore, Nov. 8 (AP).—A search continued today for Alfred Wolfgang Domann, a former German air force interpreter who escaped three weeks ago from the prisoner of war stockade at Fort George C. Meade, Md.

Fred Hallford, special agent in charge of the Baltimore office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, said that Domann has a good knowledge of five languages, including English, which he speaks fluently.

Domann was an agricultural student at the University of Munich before he entered the German army in 1939. He had lived in Riverdale, N. Y., from 1924 until 1932, when he returned to Germany with his father at the age of 14.

Domann worked on a farm detail while at Meade and exhibited a real interest while there in remaining in the United States and becoming a farmer, the FBI agent said.

He is 27 years old, 6 feet 3 inches tall and weighs 195 pounds. He has clean-cut features, blond hair and a fair complexion. He made his escape from the stockade on October 18, Hallford said.

Maryland Schools Plan Open House Next Week

Brutal Beatings, Other Abuses Charged at Va. Penitentiary

Richmond, Va., Nov. 8 (AP).—The Richmond News-Leader today published a stenographic report of Howard Carwile's interview with his client, Edward I. Wall, 30-year-old bigamist inmate of the State farm, in which Wall is quoted as saying there are bloody beatings, overwork, mistreatment of sick prisoners, immoral conditions and lack of sanitation at the State Farm.

Carwile, an attorney, interviewed Wall yesterday at the State Penitentiary here, where he was brought by order of Governor Darden for a medical examination.

Carwile is retained by Wall's sister, Mrs. Helen Kuntz of Alexandria, La., to make an investigation of State Farm conditions. She has charged that her brother and others were brutally beaten and abused at the State institution. Her charges were denied by Maj. Rice M. Youell, State commissioner of corrections. Governor Darden has promised Carwile a "full investigation" of the charges.

Other Allegations

The paper said Wall claimed prisoners were beaten for saying they were sick and sitting down while at work in a cornfield with water over their shoetops from the mud; that he was put to work picking up potatoes "when I was not able to stand up" after Mrs. Kuntz visited the Governor and asked medical aid for her brother; that inmates "dip their spoons in the serving pan," even those with syphillis and that syphilitic and gonorrhea patients help with the canning.

According to the transcript, Wall told Carwile he had not been beaten. "It's a dirty place, but I am not going to lie on anyone," the prisoner said. "They have never struck me. I had to get a prisoner to pull my two front teeth because there was no dentist to do it."

Youell said several days ago that Wall was not one of the prisoners beaten at the farm when they feigned sickness and refused to work in a cornfield last September, but that some of the recalcitrants were given corporal punishment. Youell said State Farm officials and doctors have described Wall a "malingerer."

Stenographic Report

The News-Leader quoted Wall from the stenographic report as follows:

"Johnson was the first one to be whipped. They took off his shirt and underwear and pulled his pants down to his shoes. They used a 2-inch strap with a wooden handle.

When Captain Gordon came down across Johnson (Gordon is assistant superintendent) . . . you could see blue smoke and blood. When he hit he would pull the strap and the skin would come with it. He gave Johnson the limit, 39 lashes, and one extra because he hit him once with the edge of the strap and called that a foul, which meant that he would have another blow. He did this so he could hit him again.

"When they put them across the barrel one man sits on your head and another one on your feet and you still have the handcuffs on. He keeps you on the barrel by pulling the handcuffs up toward your head . . .

"After they finished with Johnson they had to help him up and put his clothes on. Johnson moaned and groaned. They beat five in all. The other four were Dodson, Lovell, who was a kid of 19, and Pinky and Robinson. They didn't give all of them the limit, but tore all of them up. . . ."

Brutal Beatings Claimed

The men were beaten, Wall said in the transcript, after a day in solitary confinement. Eleven men who had refused to work, claiming they were sick, were handcuffed and seated around the barrel, and Royster, Captain Gordon and all guards were present, the prisoner told Carwile.

Following the floggings, the 11 were kept in solitary until September 24. They had refused to work on September 19, according to versions of both Wall, his sister and Major Youell.

Wall's stenographic account also relates that men of 70 and boys of 15 are worked in the fields and that "I have seen kids unload fertilizer until their knees wobble;" that an "hysterical Negro" at the farm, crawled out of a window and started over the fence and that guards "shot his side off"; that boys of 14 and 15 were kept with veteran criminals and that two boys were whipped "before our beating affair."

Carwile said he has names of 60 State Farm prisoners who say they will testify if protected against punishment at the State Farm.

Royster is Target

Carwile declared that Superintendent Royster will be the main target in the case, and that he is convinced Royster is "unfit" to hold that position.

"If what Wall says is true and Royster (R. L. Royster, farm superintendent) presides at beatings like he was at a Roman feast, he should be ousted," the lawyer said. "No man should be allowed to perpetuate the institution of flogging anywhere in the United States. It is my conviction he should be discharged."

The Virginia Code prohibits whipping or flogging of prisoners "away from the penitentiary" until "24 hours after the offense" and when inflicted shall not be cruel or inhuman."

Baby Deserter Gets One Year In Reformatory

Baltimore, Nov. 8 (AP).—Mrs. Josephine Wise, young mother charged with abandoning her year-old son in a trash barrel recently, was sentenced today to not over one year in a reformatory by Judge Edwin Dickerson in criminal court.

In imposing the sentence, Judge Dickerson told the 21-year-old mother that the confinement "is not so much in the way of punishment as an effort to try and help you."

The boy, Albert Lee Wise, has been under the care of his maternal grandmother for the last two weeks.

The child was found by passers-by in an alley trash barrel on October 19 and Mrs. Wise was arrested four days later.

Md. Woman Escapes As 2 Trains Hit Auto

Halethorpe, Md., Nov. 8 (AP).—Mrs. Doris I. Turner's automobile stalled in a grade crossing of the main line of the Pennsylvania Railroad today and she got out seconds before the car was hit by a train going 70 miles an hour, tossed onto the opposite track and hit by another express traveling at the same rate of speed.

Service on the line, which carries about 200 trains a day, was delayed 30 minutes.

8 Geese Hunters Fined For Exceeding Bag Limit

Millington, Md., Nov. 8 (AP).—Magistrate C. E. Melvin said today that eight men charged with exceeding the bag limit for wild geese had forfeited $52.35 each in collateral they had posted.

The men had been charged by a regional deputy game warden with killing a total of 35 geese before 7 a. m. last Friday, the opening day of the season. The daily bag limit is two geese per gunner per day.

'Love Letters', Earle, A Romantic Melodrama Out of the Top Drawer

WITH AMNESIA a prime factor in its development, "Love Letters," I presume, will be classified by many as "psychological drama," but to a far greater number the new picture at the Earle Theater will appeal as an absorbingly interesting love story, high in suspense, intellingently and convincingly acted and efficiently directed.

Anita Louise

The melodramatic elements of the story—there are murder, a trial scene and a certain quality of mystery in it—are introduced less for sensationalism than as something that might have happened and are so adroitly maneuvered by the principal figures in the action that a strong grip is placed upon the spectator's attention and emotions, with no suggestion ever that here is a tawdry business that might better have been left undone.

In adapting the Chris Massie novel to the screen, Ayn Rand has imparted authenticity, authority and a bit of grace to a splendidly fashioned script.

The background of the drama is remotely war, but there is no taint of the "war picture" in the developments that reveal themselves upon the screen—not even a uniform, save in the picture's introductory sequences when Alan Quinton is writing the letters from which the title is derived to a girl he has never seen on behalf of an inarticulate comrade in arms.

After Quinton, hospitalized for wounds, has learned that Roger Morland, for whom he penned the romantic missives, has returned home, married the girl and shortly thereafter died under mysterious circumstances, he, too, is invalided to his home in Essex, outside of London, and comes into possession of a drab little place in the country bequeathed him by an aunt of some eccentricity.

Pitched in Right Key

Urged by a strange compulsion, he seeks the girl to whom he had written the amorous passages that had won her for his friend. That he discovers her, but not her identity, largely by coincidence, in no way impairs the integrity, the forcefulness or the charm of the engrossing events that comprise the body and substance of a play that finds a rich vein of entertainment in the unfathomable effects shock can have upon the mind.

By judicious employment of the flashback as a means of clarifying the tightly meshed movements of the plot, the picture is given a constantly mounting momentum that culminates in an emotional impact of no negligible force.

It could be that in less skillful hands "Love Letters" might deteriorate into merely another fatuous and flamboyant piece of sensationalism, but as interpreted and portrayed by Jennifer Jones and Joseph Cotten, in the pivotal roles, and such as Ann Richards, Gladys Cooper, Cecil Kellaway, Anita Louise, Ernest Cossart and Reginald Denny among those prominent in support, it becomes an exhibit well up in the top brackets of current releases.

Those to whom "The Song of Bernadette" may have imparted the wholly fallacious notion that Jennifer Jones was a "one role actress" here will find indisputable evidence that she is firmly intrenched in her place as one of the cinema's most brilliantly gifted stars.

A Virtuoso Performance

Her assumption of the role of the sensitive young woman whose mind, but not her reason, has been temporarily benumbed by a harrowing experience and overpowering disillusionment, is marked by a naturalness, power and ineffable charm that few other players could bring to it. It is a performance that will not fade quickly from any memory.

In the opposite role of Quinton, Joseph Cotten is no less restrained and effective. His portrayal dovetails perfectly with Miss Jones' to lend peculiar grace to the tale of a great love engendered between two utter strangers through the instrument of an eloquent anonymity.

Contributing vitally to the shape of events, Gladys Cooper limns the character of Aunt Beatrice with minute expertness, and, as Quinton's inherited caretaker, Cecil Kellaway adds no less generously to the high level of the film's excellence.

Among those of lesser importance, Anita Louise, as Alan's betrothed, displaced by the woman he has never met to know; Roger Morland, as the instigator of all that befalls, and both Ernest Cossart and Reginald Denny in the brief courtroom scene, lend strong evidence of the punctilious care with which the picture has been produced.

Ranking quite with the foremost of the principals, Ann Richards makes both a believable and sympathetic person of Dilly Carson, the one connecting link between the innocent victim of circumstances and the man who seeks to bring her restitution for the ills he blames upon himself.

Director Redeems Himself

In this subject, Director William Dieterle more than atones for the shortcomings of another of his efforts currently on view on a local screen. He has guided "Love Letters" with unfailing judgment, sensitiveness and good taste along a torturous and hazardous path.

Producer Wallis has given his picture no enormous or spectacular production, but has seen to it with fine discretion that every scene conforms nicely in atmosphere and dimensions to the spirit of the incident for which it serves as background.

The short subjects on the bill at the Earle this week are in consonance with the quality of the major feature.

"Unusual Occupations" presents in Technicolor a series of unique vocations and avocations followed by resourceful individuals not attracted by conventional pursuits—like the male milliner who fashion's milady's grotesque headgear out of cigarets, match clips, kitchen utensils, whiskbrooms, mops and other convenient materials as fantastic as some of the hats women actually wear!

The Merrie Melodie color cartoon, "Fresh Airdale," deals amusingly with an outrageous miscarriage of justice in the animal world, and the picturized news events cover a wide and interesting world range.

Altoona Sisters Parade Before Supreme Court

Even the United States Supreme Court had its picketline yesterday.

Parading throughout the day before the impressive white building were three Altoona, Pa., sisters. They charged on placards that the constitutional rights of one of them, Mrs. Edith Nycum, had been violated by her arrest for posting billboards on her house uncomplimentary to the city officials.

Department store managers, after planning in the morning to close at 4:30 p. m., decided immediately after the strike's end to remain open to the usual 6 o'clock closing hour. Shopping crowds were soon back to near normal, they reported.

Municipal Government employes, promised that they would be let off at 3 p. m., if the strike continued, got off a half-hour early anyway although the strike had ended. They were dismissed at 4:15 p. m.

Broadway Glossary

JOB: A few days ago a group of American troops stationed in Prague visited Jan Masaryk, the Foreign Minister. Masaryk told them of his experiences during his last visit to America. He met Louis B. Mayer, the head of MGM, who was elated that day because of a race won by Busher, the prize horse of his racing stable . . . Mayer listened to Masaryk and offered him a job. "Thanks," said Masaryk, "but I'm too heavy to be a jockey."

BILL: Mike Romanoff, Hollywood's top restaurateur, suffered a closed right eye in a fight with two men who deserved the beating Mike gave them . . . That night Nathaniel Arnot, the Baltimore industrialist who opened a West Coast plant, dined at Romanoff's and asked Mike to join his table. "Have something, Mike," Arnot invited. Then he saw the closed right eye and suggested a raw steak for it. Romanoff agreed, and the waiter brought a raw steak which Mike placed on his discolored eye . . . When Arnot called for his check he found an item: "One raw steak—$4.50."

SCIENCE: All the scientists who worked on all the projects in the development of the atomic bomb are organizing a single federated association. Many of the top men are wondering why President Truman, who conferred with only two of the scientists—two who are in favor of the May-Johnson bill—never conferred with Albert Einstein, whose formula was the start of the atomic bomb, and who used to confer with Roosevelt. . . . Einstein, incidentally, said a few days ago: "There are no differences between Russia and America which can remotely be called major ones. Much of the differences result from the momentum of past differences rather than actual or existing ones."

RETURN: When the Nazis razed Lidice after shooting the adult men and deporting the women, more than a hundred children of the village disappeared. Only 13 of these children have been found, and only one has returned to Lidice . . . These children report that they were given German names, then were sold to German families along the railroad stops for 50 marks each and an assurance that the families would raise them to be good Nazis.

FOOD: Sergt. Gottfried Reinhardt, the producer-author and son of the late Max Reinhardt, is one of the heaviest eaters that ever came to Hollywood. Once a group of MGM writers watched Reinhardt devour a series of meat courses placed before him. Irv Brecher shook his head in wonder and stated: "Gottfried eats meat balls like I eat cherries."

CHATTER: Louis Fischer, whose works were banned in India by special government decree three years ago, will write a column on world affairs for 12 Indian daily newspapers. The ban finally was lifted last September. Fischer's column will be called "Men and Politics" . . . John Farrar, formerly of Farrar & Rinehart, is returning to the book-publishing field. Farrar, who served with the OWI overseas during the war, will go into partnership with Roger Straus, jr., who soon will get his discharge from the Navy. The firm will be called Farrar, Straus & Cox . . . Anna and John Boettiger are busy writing joint and separate magazine articles.

DISPUTE: During the London session of the Council of Foreign Ministers, when Molotov and Ernest Bevin became heated in their arguments, Bevin told Molotov: "You forget, sir, that I represent British labor" . . . "You forget," replied Molotov, "not I."

PLAGIARISM: Within 24 hours after the announcement that Damon Runyon is writing a new play to be called "A License to Steal," a claim was entered by another playwright who insists that he had copyrighted this title a few months ago. As a matter of fact, Runyon wrote a story called "A License to Steal" 30 years ago . . . Runyon's style and plots are so distinctive and unique that only once was he ever involved, indirectly, in a plagiarism case. It happened when two Hollywood screenwriters wrote a movie which some of the reviewers said was reminiscent of Runyon. A man brought a plagiarism suit against these two writers and—because the critics had said the story was Runyon-like—he started to make Runyon a joint defendant. The threat of a million-dollar suit for libel quickly persuaded the man to drop Runyon's name from the legal papers.

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Absenteeism among nurses at Gallinger Hospital during the two days of the transit strike was approximately 18 per cent, Alvin R. Sweeney, hospital superintendent, reported yesterday.

Seizure

An Editorial

What happened today at the Timken Roller Bearing Co., in the blocking of President William E. Umstattd's entrance to his office, is tantamount to seizure of the plant by pickets. Not seizure by the federal government, as in the case of other industries taken over for operation, but reprehensible seizure by posted picket.

To the extent that a union is responsible for the conduct of its pickets, the union is responsible for Mr. Umstattd's inability to enter upon the property which he is bound to administer for the benefit of employees, owners and the community.

It is to be assumed that union officials regret the incident and that they have no intention of compounding its consequences by permitting a recurrence of such high-handedness.

There has been no change in the strike situation. The C. I. O. have closed our plants completely and no offices are open. We cannot answer telephone calls, telegrams or correspondence.

We will pay all bills promptly when law and order is restored and our office force can gain admittance to our general offices.

The Company remains willing to negotiate with the Union concerning any grievances in accordance with the procedure in our contract, including submission to arbitration of any grievance not settled by negotiation.

Labor Department panel: O'Connell, Richard W. Goodrick and Gilbert S. McCutcheon.

For the union: Sam Berong, member executive council of the Amalgamated Street Railway and Motor Coach Employes; William S. Simms, president Local 689, and Walter H. Van Stavern, Walter J. Bierwagen and R. E. Hanna, special negotiating committee.

Main point at issue was wages. The men are now on a 40-hour week at $1.02 an hour, with time and a half for overtime.

Refunds on Passes

While the panel was meeting, employes on another floor of the company's offices were busy handling a flood of weekly passes mailed in for $1 refund. Passes not turned in will be good for 25 cents in purchasing next week's $1.25 passes.

The panel has 14 days in which to reach a decisiono, before the union committee must report back to their local. However, the feeling was expressed yesterday that if negotiations showed progress at the end of the 14 days an extension of time probably would be granted.

The National Negro Congress yesterday appealed for an early settlement of the transit company's differences with the men, and urged wage increase be granted. It further stated that the "company's consistent un-American policy of not promoting its competent Negro employes to platform men and bus operators has unnecessarily curtailed the service to which the community is entitled."

The tram coming down 14th st. nw. about 4:30 p. m. stopped at U st. and filled up. Or at least it would have been full except for the two elderly ladies who stopped midway down the center aisle, blocking all efforts to "move to the rear."

A thin-faced old gentleman with bright blue eyes sat on the aisle side of the second seat and refused to be contaminated with a seatmate.

been changed by the bomb, he declared, adding:

"Fortunately there are signs that our political leaders realize the seriousness of the situation and are trying to use it to bring about a world union of peoples and an end to war."

In his new role as advisor to the Senate committee entrusted with atomic energy control legislation, Condon arranged to lecture to them last night on nuclear physics. Dr. Harold Urey, University of Chicago Nobel prize winner, agreed to participate. Condon promised some "physical demonstrations" along with the lectures, held for committee members only at the Bureau of Standards.

of sugar and fats and oils than he was several weeks ago when he discussed them at news conferences. At that time, he expressed the hope that fats and oils could be taken off the ration list by the first of the year and that the sugar situation would be eased considerably by next spring.

His optimism on sugar was based largely upon the reported discovery of 1,600,000 tons of sugar on Java after its conquest from the Japanese and upon expectations that the Philippines would soon be able to resume exports.

Java Strike Cited

But civil strife in Java and other Netherland East Indies islands has prevented, he said today, the movement of sugar from that area.

Moreover, latest reports indicate, he said, that the Philippines may not be able to export sugar for another 18 months.

As for fats and oils, domestic production of lard, cottonseed and soy beans has not been as favorable as expected.

The meat situation, on the other hand, is improving right along, the secretary said, as a result of increased marketing of livestock and plentiful supplies of turkeys and poultry for the coming holiday season.

Anderson said the increased allocation of food for Europe will leave plenty for the maintenance of present levels of consumption in this country.

price ceiling is $2.86, based on prices in that area in January, 1943.

Dealers will sell the milk as powdered milk, butter and cheese at the existing lower price rather than go to the added expense involved in putting out whole milk, Derrick said.

The milk producers group has asked OPA to make the 99-cent price adjustment so this source of milk will be available to the District throughout the winter.

C. H. C. Beakes, price executive of OPA's dairy, poultry and eggs section, to whom the price adjustment was referred, is in New York City and could not be reached for comment yesterday. However, it was learned a decision on the matter will be reached this week.

BASEBALL—Eddie Dyer gets the job of managing the Cardinals after Billy Southworth cast his lot with the rich new owners of the Braves, and it is always one of the better jobs in baseball, as long as it lasts. A Cardinal manager has few worries about playing talent the best farm system has access to.

POVICH

The Cardinals can afford to be more particular about their ballplayers than any other team. They put more emphasis on speed than any other club. With double A league farms like Columbus and Rochester they can be choosy about their rookies. And Dyer will fall heir to a grist of stars returning from the armed services. The 1946 National League pennant is virtually conceded to the Cards.

Owner Sam Breadon pointed out when he named Dyer as his manager that Dyer was completely familiar with the Cards' farm system. Breadon probably attaches more importance to that item than to Dyer's talents as a manager. He never did consider any manager indispensible. It doesn't require a genius to manage the players Breadon rounds up for his managers.

Winning pennants doesn't mean security, however, for a Cardinal manager. Breadon fired Rogers Hornsby, Bob O'Farrell and Gabby Street after they won pennants for him. He fired Southworth in midseason several years back, before rehiring him, and Ray Blades was another who got the axe from Breadon. Former managers of the Cardinals aer a numerous breed.

TRACK—Sweden brands Gunder Hagg and Arne Anderson, its mile-running champions, as professionals for accepting money from track promoters, and thereby uncovers a national scandal. Track is Sweden's national sport, and the revelations could best be compared, perhaps, to the shock America would feel if it was proved that Army's football team was a collection from the pro league playing for pay.

Fifteen Swedish clubs have admitted that Hagg and Anderson were paid fees for appearing in track meets that were supposed to be purely amateur. The clubs apparently are as guilty as th two performers. Their fame had become so great that competition fo their services was brisk, and their appearances always insured big gate receipts. The temptation was there for both Hagg and Anderson, as well as the promoters.

The A.A.U. of this country will probably take the tip and inquire now into Hagg's two tours here. American clubs have not been above violating the amateur code. Paavo Nurmi found promoters, masquerading as amateur clubs, who were willing to go high for his services. An old Georgetown miler, told us he made $5000 in one season, running against Nurmi—as an amateur.

PRO FOOTBALL—The All-American conference has announced that it is moving into Baltimore next season and setting up the eighth of its franchises in a Coast-to-Coas circuit. Baltimore promises to be one of the most financially successful towns in the league. The National Football League had always hoped to include Baltimore, but never was able to gain rights to the big Municipal Stadium.

Jim Crowley, president of the All-American League, is indicating that the new Baltimore club will be coached by Rip Miller, who was one of the seven mules in the Notre Dame line in 1924 when Crowley was one of the Four Horsemen in the backfield. W ith Adam Walsh, another Notre Dame alumnus of that year coaching the Cleveland Rams, and Elmer Layden commissioner of the National Football League, Notre Dame's big names are doing very well in pro football.

When the year comes that the National Football League and the All-American League forget their nonsensical warring and make peace, as they surely will, a Baltimore-Washington pro football world series would be the most natural rivalry the leagues could produce.

BOXING—Billy Conn, at 194 pounds, lacks speed in three-round exhibition against Bearcat Jones at Kansas City. At 194, Conn is 10 pounds over his best fighting weight, despite his claims that the added poundage gives him more punching power. It was Conn's speed that was winning ihm his fight with Joe Louis until he was knocked out in the thirteenth round.

Whenn Conn starts fancying himself as a puncher that's good news to the Louis camp. It wasn't until Conn tried to punch it out with Louis in their last bout that he was beaten, and very suddenly. Conn will need more work than Louis to regain his fighting from. Conn was not the best-behaved soldier in the Army, and a Conn without speed has no chance to beat the likes of even an aging Joe Louis.

Cadets 'Whoop-It-Up;' Blaik Cagey About Irish Game

By Gayle Talbot

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 8 (AP). For the first time since Pearl Harbor the inmates of this austere stone fortress were permitted tonight to unbend and let down their collective locks and generally raise the roof in the time-honored prelude to the Notre Dame game.

Bed sheets flaming with cadet art and exhortations to beat the Irish waved from a thousand windows, as they did before the war, and the entire academy was wrapped in a fine frenzy of emotion about its peerless football team.

Climaxing the night's program was the annual pre-game rally in the mes shall, with some 2500 cadets and old grads and honored guests ripping it up and telling the players what they would be expected to do on Saturday. Principal speaker was Brig. Gen. Emmett "Rosy" O'Donnell, hero of the Pacific air war and an Army gridiron immortal.

Coach Earl Blaik did not attend, and admitted he was slightly perturbed that the tumult and the shouting might work his boys into too fine a lather, give them too sharp an emotional edge for the game. He is getting them out of this atmosphere early tomorrow and taking them in to the Knollwood Country Club on the outskirts of New York for a restful day and night.

About the time the Cadets start down-river, Coach Hugh Devore and the Notre Dame squad will check in at the Bear Mountain Inn, big resort hotel some 5 miles from West Point. The Irish will take their final light workout there tomorrow, hile Army will stretch its legs at Yankee Stadium if the weather is good.

Convinced that his husky young men were in the best possible condition for their joust with the team which is ranged second to them in the country, Coach Blaik tapered Blanchard, Davis and Co. off with only an hour's signal drill today. Every man on the Army squad is fit to play, and Blaik said he might start 215-pound Barney Poole at right end in place of Dick Pitzer. Poole missed the last two games because of injuries.

Asked if he thought his team might run up a score as high as last year's 59-0 against the Irish, Blaik cast a negative vote.

"There'll be scoring," he smiled, "but this too good a Notre Dame team to beat by that kind of score. It's a more solid team than last year. It's backs are more aggressive, both on offense and defense.

"You've got to figure, too, that Notre Dame will be playing hard, closet-o-the-vest football Saturday and not passing as much as they did last year. The fact that we intercepted some eight of their passes last year had much to do with running up the score."

The Army mentor admitted he and his assistants had put in a tremendous lot of work trying to perfect a defense against the Irish passer, Boley Dancewitz.

"We think it's a pretty good defense," he said. "At least, we hope it hasn't been wasted effort. There's no doubt that Dancewitz is a fine passer, but I don't look for him to throw too many Saturday. If you'll look back over their games this season you'll notice they haven't had to do much passing."

As for his own great team, the Army coach appeared loath to do too much talking, possibly in the belief that the boys already had read sufficient about their all-conquering selves. He did take occasion, however, to spike a persistent belief that he has been pitting grown men against beardless boys.

Comparing the probable starting line-ups for Saturday's game, Blaik showed that the average age of the two elevens will be exactly 20 years and 5 months each.

"If they are that even on the field it should be quite a football game," he pointed out.

Wood Falls As Twink Mo Swerves

By Walter Haight

Post Staff Writer

Pimlico, Md., Nov. 8.—Apprentice Jockey Ernest Wood of Annapolis, Md., was seriously injured in the second race today when his mount swerved into the fence at the far turn. A hasty examination before he was rushed to the local Maryland General Hospital revealed Wood was suffering from head and internal injuries as well as a broken arm, close to his right shoulder.

Wood, one of the Nation's most promising learning riders and winner of five races here, was aboard Point A View Farm's Twink Mo in the 6-furlongs race. Well backed in the field, the horse suddenly ducked into the inside rail, throwing Wood against the supporting pole and then appeared to trample him.

Jockey Conn McCreary, who was astride Woolfberry in the rear of the field said: "Wood's horse was running straight and true, but as the boy went to bank the turn, the horse suddenly shied or ducked right into the fence. I had to pull up to avoid hitting him."

Longshots Score

The race was won by F. Carberry's Farmer's Girl, a $16.90 shot, that put the finishing touches on a $245 daily double. The winner of the first race was G. C. Smith's Splinter at a $14.90 pay-off.

Wood's injury was not the only excitement of the day at the races. A longshot winner in a photo finish and a disqualification marked the fourth race. N. Petitte's Tedious Miss was the upset victor in the field of six at a $30.60 mutuel. Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords' Dawn Attack finished second, beaten a neck, but interferred with Mrs. Roy Carruthers' Jimmie in midstretch. Jimmie, the favorite, was fourth behind Sandy Lane Farm's Elmo T.

In the official placing, Elmo T was awarded second money with Jimmie third and Dawn Attack fourth. The stewards later announced that Apprentice J. Bradley, who rode Dawn Attack, had been suspended for five days for reckless riding in the stretch.

Wall Handled

Tedious Miss went to the front at the break and held on with rare courage under Jockey Nick Wall's vigorous handling. The winner was clocked in 1:12 1-5 for the 6 furlongs.

Bobanet Stable's Gay Bit developed stretch momentum this afternoon and carried on to a half length victory in the Glen Burnie, featuring the Thursday program. With Apprentice Jockey R. J. Martin engineering the drive, Gay Bit scored over M. B. Goff's Skytracer. In third position in a field of five came John Marsch's Occupy.

A crowd of 14,849 played every horse in the race and at one time only two points in the odds separated any entry. By ten cents on the dollar, Gay Bit was the favorite over Skytracer and paid $6.60 in registering his sixth victory in 16 starts this year. The race was worth $2200 to the winner and brought the son of Gay Monarch and Long Bit a season's total of $32,820.

Skytracer began as if to steal the race. Doug Dodson hustled the son of Flares and opened a four-length lead early while Gay Bit was trailing under the guidance of Martin. Occupy made several attempts to get to the leader and faltered. In the stretch, Dodson went to the whip, but Gay Bit roused, came with a bold rush and was a going-away winner.

Accuse Hagg, Andersson

Athletic Body Silent on Charges That Swede Stars Were Paid

Stockholm, Nov. 8 (AP).—The Swedish Athletic Association remained officially silent tonight regarding a story carried earlier in the day by the newspaper Expressen that Gunder Hagg and Arne Andersson, world record-breaking track athletes, had been declared professional.

Previously the association had said it was making an investigation of charges that leading athletic clubs were paying top flight runners to represent them, and indicated that disciplinary action would be taken.

Hagg and Anderson, who had been invited to compete in the United States this winter, are the most widely known among the 15 track athletes the Expressen said had been declared professional.

Swedish sports writers feared the world records of the two famous runners might be erased, especially if it is found that the offenses which cost them their amateur standing had been committed before the races.

Lennart Strand, a newcomer who defeated Andersson in the Swedish National 1500 meters last summer and later out-legged both Andersson and Hagg in an international mile, was not listed among the athletes Expressen said had been classed professional. Strand also has been invited to compete in the United States.

In New York, Dan Ferris of the National AAU said that an athlete who turned professional by accepting money for running could never regain his amateur status under rules in force in both Sweden and the United States.

He also said that if the offenses were of long standing, many world records likely would be taken off the books. (The New York office of the Swedish information bureau said it had reports that 22 world records might be deleted. Hagg has run the mile in 4:01.4, although Andersson hold the listed mark at 4:02.4.)

Ferris explained that Andersson, Hagg and Strand had been invited on August 1 to compete in the United States this winter and that no reseponse had been received, "indicating that the investigation must have been in progress for some time." The invitation was addressed to the Swedish amateur group, not to the individual athletes.

North-South Won 1st Time By Amateur

Pinehurst, N. C., Nov. 8, (AP).—An amateur won the North and South open golf tournament today for the first time in the 44-year history of this fixture. Lieut. Cary Middlecoff of Memphis, with a 72-hole total of 280, won by five strokes from Denny Shute of Akron, Ohio.

And Middlecoff won it with a finish that resembled a Byron Nelson stretch run. Needing only par on the last three holes to clinch victory, the 24-year-old Army dentist produced a par, birdie and eagle. He blazed home with four straight threes.

Grabbing a one-stroke lead at the halfway post, Middlecoff fired a 69 this morning to add another stroke to his lead after 54 holes, while his chief rivals—Shute and Ben Hogan of Hershey, Pa.—were off his pace.

First Nine Holes Wobbly

Then perhaps the pressure began to tell, for his first nine holes in this afternoon's rounds were wobbly. A pair of sixes contributed to a two-over-par 38 going out. When he hit the final stretch, however, he was the sub-par shooter again, coming in with a 34. He holed 25-foot putts on the sixteenth, for an eagle, and on the eighteenth for a birdie.

Middlecoff received a medal and a $100 war bond prize with the top money of $1000 going to Shute, who had 70-75 today. Hogan, with a pair of 73s today, was third at 286. He had his troubles today with the rough and the traps.

iFve were tied for fourth at 288—Willie Coggin, White Plains, N. Y., who had 73—71 today; Tony Penna, Dayton, Ohio, 72—71; Art Doering, Denver, 70—76; Ky Laffoon, Chicago, 70—72 and Herman Keiser, Akron, 70—73.

Snead, Shreeve Tie

Sammy Snead of Hot Springs, who had 73-75 today and Virgil Shreeve of San Francisco, with 72-74, were tied at 290.

This was the second time in three months that an amateur has humbled the professionals. Fred Haas, jr., of New Orleans won the Memphis open last August.

Middlecoff's score for the four rounds was 8 under par. Being placed in the same final day threesome with the famed belting Hogan had no adverse effects on the Tennessean. If any cracking was done, it was Hogan's game that suffered. Not only was he consistently outdriven by his amateur rival but he found a half dozen traps and spots in the rough.

A New Deal, Please . . .

Drive to Oust Shaughnessy Launched by Pitt Students

Pittsburgh, Nov. 8, (AP).—Disgruntled Pitt students made known today they are circulating a petition asking a "new deal in football, starting with a new coach" to replace the veteran Clark Shaughnessy.

"We haven't had a good football team here at Pitt since Dr. Sutherland (former Coach Jock Sutherland) left," the petition asserted. Its sponsors, who declined to identify themselves, said 500 students had signed the paper and it would be presented to Pitt Chancellor Rufus H. Fitzgerald "when we get 2000 names."

Shaughnessy said the petition was sponsored by "trouble-makers who are enemies of the institution, stimulated by people with ulterior motives."

No Credit

"Instead of giving us credit for having a live team, they try to capitalize on our losses," he said.

The Panthers have won two and lost five this season. Their heaviest setbacks were to such tough customers as Notre Dame, 39-9, and Purdue, 28-0.

The petition listed four complaints. Shaughnessy answered them in an iinterview, remarking that "I think all the criticisms are compliments."

Here are charges and answers:

Petition: "1. He has never stressed the fundamentals of football—blocking, tackling, conditioning."

Shaughnessy: "We don't have enough men to do much scrimmaging. We keep the team ready to play on Saturdays."

Petition: "2. In the Notre Dame this year, three plays were run while Pitt had only 10 men on the field."

Shaughnessy: "This occurred only once. The boys made a mistake and didn't substitute properly."

Petition: "3. He continually substituted, ruining two Pitt scoring chances by losing important yardage (in the Notre Dame game)."

Shaughnessy: "I substituted to get in an extraordinarily good kicker."

Petition: "4. He doesn't permit his quarterback to run the team."

Shaughnesesy: "The quarterbacks are all freshmen. One never played football before and he needs help. I'd be the first to leave him on his own if he didn't need help."

Shaughnessy drew sharp criticism last month from several Pitts-

FourHorse Field Finishes In Double Dead Heat in N. Y.

Jamaica Race Track, N. Y., Nov. 8 (AP).—Something new in a racing novelty for a New York track developed with the running of today's featured Helena (Class D) Handicap when two dead heats resulted in the four-horse contest.

William Helis' Fancied Pindus and the Havahome Stable's Omamax, the rank outsider, wound up all even for first position. And three lengths behind came Philip Bieber's Oatmeal and the Star View Stable's Petrol Point in a deadlock for third.

With only straight and place betting on the small field, Pindus returned $2.60 and $2.70, while Omamax paid $4.60 and $3.80. The two winners received $2137.50 apiece out of the purse, while Oatmeal and Petrolt Point each took down $375.

Pindus and Omamax were timed in 1:51 4-5 for the 1 mile and a furlong trip. Arnold Kirkland rode Pindus and Ted Atkinson had the mount on Omamax.

Pindus might have won without splitting the honors but for stumbling just before he reached the finish line.

A crowd of 23,235 witnessed the double dead heat and six other event on this second of eight victory meeting programs being conducted by the five metropolitan racing associations.

Pindus dashed right to the front, with Petrol Point hard by in the run to the first turn, while Omamax was well clear of the slow-starting Oatmeal. As they began the backstretch run, Pindus drew more than a length away from Petrol Point. Oatmeal gained slowly but surely on Omamax.

The battle drew tighter as they swung for home. Pindus still was a length on top, with the other three bunched. In the final drive, the favorite and outsider pulled clear of their rivals, while the two trailers remained on even terms.

Virginia Preps 4 New Backs For Richmond

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 8 (AP).—Virginias' undefeated football team may probably face the University of Richmond in their homecoming game here Saturday with a second-string backfield playing behind the reorganized varsity line.

The substitutes are Gilly Sullivan, Fredericksburg, quarterback; Joe Stanley, Lexington, fullback, and Bill Sinclair, Alexandria, and Winfield Scott, Winchester, right and left halfbacks, respectively. All four of these youngsters have been working hard all fall as understudies to the Cavalier regulars, Charlie Ellis, John Duda, Ray Brown and Jay Kennard, who have been giving Coach Frank Murray a hand helping froom the youngsters.

Line Coach Al Thomas, on the other hand, is only sure of one man who will be started in any line position. He is John Gianakos, Charlottesville, veteran left guard, who played the entire game against West Virginia. Starting ends are likely to be Bob Jameson, Ann Arbor, Mich., and Bill Pickett, of New York. Possible starter at center is Shelton Horseley of Richmond, but other positions are uncertain.

4 New 'Skins Shine in Drill For Boston

By Al Costello

Post Staff Writer.

The Redskins held a scrimmage yesterdaly in preparation for their key battle here Sunday with the Boston Yanks and four gents, from whom little has been heard this year but from whom much may be expected from here in, played a prominent part.

On offense, Merlyn Condit, former Brooklyn Dodger halfback, and Leo Pressly, former Oklahoma star who has only one year of college play behind him, were the boys. Pressly, a fullback at Oklahoma, who has been playing center in his short career as a Redskin, returned to his fullback spot and stamped himself as a battering ram of the future—not too distant.

Plowed Through

The big Sooner, 225 pounds of terrific driving power, although still green as dyed grass, was smashing with considerable success and showed a distinct fondness for the ball-carrying job. When he learns to hold onto the ball, Coach Dud DeGroot expects him to become one of the league's best line smashers along the Bronko Nagurski and Pug Manders type.

Defensively, the new rookie center, Al DeMao, a 1941 All-American at Duquesne, who hasn't played since entering the Navy in 1942, opened the eyes of Line Coach Turk Edwards with his vicious tackling and savvy. DeMao was racking 'em up with sureness that belied his long layoff. After his performance yesterday, Edwards announced he would have no hesitancy in using DeMao as a relief for Ki Aldrich.

Stralka Active

Clem Stralka, former Georgetown captain of 1937, who turned out to be one of the finest guards in the N. F. L. in his five years with the club before entering the Navy after the '42 season, took part in the scrimmage and looked like the "Little Bull" of old. Clem has been playing some football in Hawaii and isn't as much out of shape as at first thought. He'll definitely be in there Sunday, when the Yanks turn loose their ground-gaining quartet of Pug Manders, Johnny Martin, Johnny Grigas and the much heralded but as yet unseen Boris "Babe" Dimancheff, who will be making his season's debut. The former Purdue All-American is reported to be one of the finest ball-carrying rookies of the year.

The Redskins, on top of the Eastern division with four wins in five starts, are quoted as early 14-point favorites over the Yanks.

Navy Warned Of Michigan's Tricky Plays

Annapolis, Nov. 8 (AP).—Navy's gridders went through light contact drills today in their final rehearsal before meeting Michigan's tough Wolverines in Baltimore Stadium Saturday.

The fast powerful backfield bolstered by Bob Jenkins, who is back in shape after injuries, will have to supply the scoring punch against a Michigan team that has showed marked progress in each game, and reached a new peak in trouncing Minnesota 26-0 last weekend.

Bruce Smith is expected to start at quarterback in place of Middie Bob Hoernschemeyer, who was injured in the Navy-Penn game of two weeks ago.

Chuck Kiser, first-string tackle, who was out for two weeks, is also expected to be reday for the Wolverines on the line.

Meanwhile, Navy's scouts have cautioned the Middies that as in the case of Pennsylvania, Michigan's frequently switching offensive and defensive tactics make preparations a complicated assignment.

Faced with the prospect of tricky Wolverine attacks, and Navy's weakness on blocking and ball carrying, Coach Oscar E. Hagberg had to precision-cut practice schedules to get in adequtae offensive and defensive touches this week.

2 More Doctors Quit Fight Body

Two more physicians have resigned as medical examiners with the District Boxing Commission, it was announced yesterday by the commission secretary. The pair, Dr. John DeMayo and Dr. William Wooldridge, thus follow Dr. William Greaney, who resigned last week.

Dr. DeMayo stated last night that all three quit because of a lack of cooperation from the boxing commission.

The commission secretary reported yesterday that there'll be on comment from his office until a meeting next Tuesday.

Drug Charge Draws Year's Suspension for 'Silent Tom'

New York, Nov. 8 (AP).—Tom Smith, trainer for the Maine Chance Farm which leads all racing stables in the Nation with winnings of more than half a million dollars this year, was suspended by the Jockey Club for one year today on a charge of using a drug on the horse Magnific Duel.

The Jockey Club, which controls virtually all the major tracks in the United States, revoked Smith's license until November 1, 1946, denying him all privileges on tracks under its jurisdiction.

Two Maine Chance Farm foremen, Ernest Pevler and James Shelley, were denied privileges on all tracks controlled by the Jockey Club for 30 days, beginning today.

The stable itself, owned by Elizabeth (Arden) Graham of the cosmetics interests bearing her name, will not be affected by the ruling in the future.

Still Eligible

"The horses running in the name and interests of Maine Chance Farm are eligible to start when placed under the care of a licensed trainer acceptable to the stewards," the Jockey Club said in a prepared statement.

Today's action resulted from the third race at Jamaica, November 1, a $3000, 6-furlong test for maiden fillies which was won by the Maine Chance Farm's Magnific Duel.

In their meeting here, Jockey Club stewards ordered Magnific Duel's share of the purse forfeited and declared Grant Thorne's Meadow Maid the winner. Second money was awarded to M. Seldt's Big Bid, third to E. E. Brown's Brown Mountain and fourth to Mrs. A. C. Tuite's Lean Harvest.

"The reason for this action is violation of Rule 216F of the rules of racing which prohibits the administration of any medicine or drug to any horse, internally or externally, which affects the racing condition of the horse in a race," the Jockey Club's statement said.

Ephedrine Named

"The report of the State chemist identified the medication as ephedrine."

Smith, known as "Silent Tom," is a racing veteran who has enjoyed many years of success. He was trainer for C. S. Howard in the late 1930's and early 1940's and handled such thoroughbreds as Seabiscuit—greatest winner of them all until Whirlaway appeared—Kayak II, Mioland and Sorteado.

Forfeit of the November 1 race leaves Mrs. Graham with a record of 52 winners, 22 seconds and 16 thirds in 1945. Her horses have won a total of $512,545—less the $1900 forfeited from the November 1 purse—since January 1, 1945, topping all other stables in the country this year and establishing a new record for women owners.

The money-winning record for a stable in a single year is $601,660, set in 1944 by Warren Wright's Calumet Farm.

Terps Seeking Lost Prestige Against VMI

By Newton Bowers

Post Staff Writer

University of Maryland's Terrapins, set back twice and tied once in their last three starts, are hoping to regain some Southern Conference prestige tomorrow when they meet Virginia Military Institute's Keydets at 2 p. m. in Byrd Stadium.

The Terps will be going after their second conference victory. Maryland this season has defeated only Richmond in loop play while bowing to William and Mary and Virginia Tech. For VMI, it will be the fifth conference test. The Keydets' loop record is marred only by William and Mary.

Spiced by Homecoming Day ceremonies, the game is expected to attract the largest crowd of the season in Byrd Stadium, estimated at upward of 8000 fans, and they will be seeing their Terps in role of underdogs for the first time in the current campaign.

Battle Ahead

"We can expect a tough battle," Head Coach Paul (Bear) Bryant warned yesterday. "Despite being beaten by William and Mary, VMI has one of the best teams in the conference, and we'll have to be in rare form to win. With a boy like Lynn Chewning in their backfield, the Keydets would be menaces to any opponent."

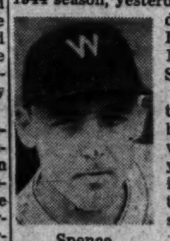
Chewning, brilliant triple-threat, is out in front by 11 points in conference scoring, and, as Carney Laslie, assistant Maryland coach, puts it, "he is the best fullback in the South." The 190-pound Chewning, whom VMI Coach Pooley Hubert says is of "All-American caliber," is the main reason the Keydets are high in conference rankings this season.

Practice Long

There was no letup in the Maryland training camp yesterday as the Terps went through another long, gruelling session, part of which was held under the lights in Byrd Stadium. The many minor injuries the Terps acquired against William and Mary last Saturday appeared healed as they ran through a series of offensive plays, most of which were concentrated on passing.

Stan Spence Out Of Navy; Confers With Griffith

Stan Spence, star centerfielder with the Washington Nationals before entering the Navy after the 1944 season, yesterday received his discharge at the Bainbridge Naval Training Station.



Spence

Released on the "hardship basis," Spence, who is past 30 years of age and is the father of two children, stopped off here yesterday en route to his Kingston, N. C., home, to confer with Glark Griffith, Nats' owner.

There was no contract talk, according to Griffith.

"He merely stopped by to tell me of his discharge," Griffith said. "Incidentally," Griffith continued, "Stan has lost a lot of excess weight and looks in good physical condition."

Thus Spence becomes the fourth Washington regular to return from the service this year. Walter Masterson, pitcher, Rightfielder Buddy Lewis and Shortstop Cecil Travis have returned to bolster the Nats.

During his stay in the Navy, Spence kept in shape by playing with the crack Bainbridge nine. Spence will rejoin the Nats in spring training next [illegible].

War Secretary Favors Rotating Service Game

Secretary of War Patterson said yesterday that he thinks it would be a good idea to hold the Army-Navy football game in different parts of the country each year.

"I'm in favor of it," he told an Associated Press reporter. "I do not see why anybody should have a monopoly."

The annual service game usually is played in an eastern city. This year's game is scheduled for Philadelphia December 1.

Mount Vernon, Ill., Nov. 8, (AP).—Bolero, white and liver pointer owned by A. G. C. Sage of Alberta, Ala., today won the American Field Quail Futurity with a $3500 purse in the 41st running of the annual event at nearby Bellrive. It was the eighth victory for Sage's dogs.

$56,000 Is Paid For Soccer Player

London, Nov. 8 (U.P.).—The Chelsea Football Club purchased Tommy Lawton, one of the greatest center forwards in modern football, for $56,000 today, the biggest fee paid for a player in several years.

Lawton, who has been awarded 30 international cups while playing for England, is 26 years old and figures to have about eight more years of topflight soccer ahead of him. He will join his new team in time to take part in the first match against the Moscow Dynamos, touring Russian soccer team.

Tech Meets Western, Coolidge Plays Wilson

10 School Games Set Here Today

Tech and Coolidge, battling desperately for an interhigh football play-off berth, meet their first tests of the vital stretch drive in two of the three series games slated for today at 3:30 p. m. Eight other scholastic contests are also carded.

The fourth-place Trainers, who must win to stay in the race, meet the rapidly improving Western eleven that defeated St. John's, 18-2, and Roosevelt, 12-7, in its last two games. Previously, the Raiders had been unable to win in three efforts. The Trainers have won four games, while dropping decisions to Anacostia and Eastern.

Tigers Win One

Coach Gil Conn's undefeated Coolidge eleven that gained undisputed possession of second place last week, also cannot afford to lose to Wilson today at Wilson, since the Colts face the high-flying Trainers and Ramblers in their remaining series games. The Green Tigers have won one and lost two in interhigh competition so far.

Fresh from their 6-0 upset of Anacostia last week, Central's Vikings invade Roosevelt Stadium to tackle the Rough Riders, who have yet to win an interhigh game. The Anacostia win provided the Vikings with their first series triumph of the season.

In the top prep school game of the day, Coach Len Askin's Devitt gridders, who boast a 5-2 record, battle St. John's Cadets, whose 2-3 record includes wins over Roosevelt and Calvert Hall. The game starts at 3:30 p. m. at Hearst Field, 37th and Idaho ave. nw.

Gonzaga Plays GU Prep

In other important games, Gonzaga goes after its sixth win against one loss at Garrett Park against Gus Welch's Georgetown Prep eleven, that has won only once in five games; St. Albans, with a fine 4-1 record, plays host to Wilmington Del.'s St. Andrews Academy; and Bethesda-Chevy Chase entertains the busy Mount Vernon High that has already played two games in the last seven days.

Rockville meets Montgomery-Blair at Meadowbrook; Winchester invades strong Fairfax; Landon battles Sidwell Friends at Landon, and George Washington journeys to Richmond to play John Marshall High.

Two Saturday games are also slated, with Washington and Lee High playing host to Baltimore's Patterson Park, and Episcopal traveling to Lynchburg to meet Virginia Episcopal.

burgh sports writers for his connections with the Redskins, with whom he is associated as an advisory coach. The Smoky City scribes bluntly said Shaugnessy's affiliation with the professionals did not permit him to devote full time to his duties at Pitt.

One writer rapped Shaughnessy severely for working the Steeler-Redskin game as an observer for Redskin coach Dud DeGroot the day after Michigan State, a club Pitt was supposed to beat easily, upset the Panthers, 12-7.

Shaughnessy did not answer the attacks but continued his work with the Redskins, a post which he still holds.

Bedard Joins Lions for Tilt With Boston

Winger Paul Badard, swift skating and high scoring sensation of Baltimore last season, joins Washington's Lions today as they point for an upset of Boston's champion olympics in an Eastern Hockey League match at Uline Arena tonight, 8:30 o'clock.

The 1945-56 debut of the undefeated Bostonians here ice has arousned unusual interest, and indications are that more than 5000 persons will be present for tonight's hostilities.

Bedard will report here from Fort Worth, Texas, this morning. He will team up with speed merchant Victor Chad tonight on the wings of the combination that features Tom Kennedy at center.

Chad, Bedard and Kennedy should rapidly develop into one of the Eastern League's ashiest and hottest scoring lines, and will be ably seconded by a unit comprised of Fred Petsura, center, and Pete Hauck and Dave Livingstons, wingmen. Gus Adams, Wyn Cook and Bill Glennie are spare forwars who will see action.

The olympics are bringing back familiar faces tonight in goalie Harvey Bennett; wingmen Joe Schmidt and Fernie Flamon, and defensemen Ty Andersen and Morris Lalle. Firmen Olympic stars who have rejoined the team since being released from the armed services include Cliff Thompson and Eddie Barry, wingmen, and Clare Martin, defensemen.

Boy, 14, Can't Keep His Mind on Home Work, His School Marks Are Falling, Due to Rift In Friendship With Girl, 15, Whom He Loves

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a boy 14 years old, a sophomore in high school and I have a great attraction to a young lady, 15, who is a member of the junior class in the same school. I have known this girl for about three months and the first two months we were very happy, admiring each other greatly and having frequent dates.

Now after an unpleasant circumstance she no longer acknowledges any existance. One day I was sitting on a front doorstep near the center of town, merely talking to a girl in whom I have no interest. A certain boy, who is noted for his lying, saw us and immediately told some cock-and-bull story to the girl in whom I am interested.

His Whole Life
Is Out of Joint

SHE and I were writing a series of letters which she broke off immediately. I wrote to her explaining all the facts but received no answer. She will not let me speak to her to explain. She talks freely with my friends but not with me. She has two sisters, one of whom is still friendly to me, as are her parents.

I have tried to forget her but I just worry all the time. My school marks are going down because I just can't pay attention in class or keep my mind on my home work. The whole situation has made me very unhappy. This means a great deal to me and my future. Please answer soon and tell me what to do, as my whole life is being upset by this misunderstanding. A. N.

Does Happiness
Trip Men Up?

DEAR A. N.: Teen-age love feelings, we all know, are excruciatingly sensitive; much more defenseless than the weathered emotions of later years; poignantly disposed to read profoundly wounding implications into the vaguest roving glance or forgetful action of the love-object.

Thus I think your former sweetheart imputed a degree of inconstancy to your mind, at least, upon learning that when not in her company you were loitering on another girl's doorstep in close conversation. In fact, I imagine she was as shocked, as humiliated, as an adult would be to find himself (or herself) victimized by a bigamist. That's why she has been holding you at arm's length, in scorn which also conceals heartbreak, ever since

As to whether you deserve such harsh judgment, so much punishment,—the brilliant Du de la Rouchefoucauld (1613-1680) remarked in his "Moral Maxims" that it is harder for a man to be constant to his sweetheart when he is happy in her favor than when she is unkind. And I think that is somewhat the moral of your present misery.

Better Match
Her Strength

YOU were feeling such a fine fellow as a result of your flourishing romance with her, and so securely the master of her affections, that man-like you unbent, involuntarily and complacently, just as the Duc says, to collect other feminine tribute proffered by the way. To a spirited girl who had been wearing her heart on her sleeve for you, as everybody in your little world knew, that would be romantic treason—especially if, as is possible, the other girl is a bold little minx. Your girl, loving you, would want you as her knight to be as unapproachable as Galahad, insofar as other girls are concerned.

So while the tattletale brought you to account, it looks as if you had carelessly led with your chin into trouble. And since the girl's pride is too strong, and her hurt too deep to let her forgive—right away, at least—there is only one thing to do, namely: Pull yourself together, resolved to prove that you are at least her equal in strength of character. In letting yourself go to pieces, as described, while she keeps her chin up and behaves as usual, you give her additional reason to look down her nose at you. Your one last chance of getting her to relent is to turn a stoic shoulder on the whole situation, forcibly concentrating on study to hold yourself steady. M. H.

POTATO PANCAKES make a delightful vegetable variation. While such meat as a pot roast is simmering to tenderness, you can grate the potatoes for making the batter. Serve the cakes hot off the griddle

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

Braised Beef, Potato Pancakes Delicious Foundation for Meal

It took a scarcity of meat to get many cooks off the beaten path in meal planning. When steaks, chops and roasts were not so plentiful many a resourceful person turned to the less familiar cuts. The result has been that there's hardly a cut of meat that the average person can't cook to a tender T.

This experience has been a valuable gain to homemakers. It is to be hoped that the prewar way of cooking—broil and roast—won't return to the exclusion of the savory, succulent meats that can be cooked by braising.

Meat experts have told us that we will have increased supplies of lean beef. This meat can be braised to tender and savory perfection. No one can dispute that braised short ribs of beef, braised stuffed flank steak and braised lamb shanks deserve a place on menus.

Recently the owner of a grocery store asked me why it is that women insist on buying only steaks, roasts and chops instead of the breast of lamb, short ribs of beef and other less tender cuts.

The answer to this question is that steaks, roasts and chops take less time to prepare. However, the less tender cuts of meat are just as nutritious. No matter what the cut, kind or cost of meat, there is present the same important B vitamins, the same complete high quality protein, the same minerals. Knowledge of the nutrition of these less tender cuts has been the valuable gain of many cooks during the war.

Prove to yourself that the lean beef on the market today can be braised to deliciousness. A rump roast of veal can also be cooked to savory tenderness. And in case you've forgotten how delicious potato pancakes can be, why not serve them with beef cooked by the a la Russe way. This is a suggested menu:

Dinner Menu

Cream of Celery Soup
Crisp Crackers Radishes
Beef a la Russe
Potato Pancakes Green Salad
Apple Crisp Coffee

Two pounds of the lean beef will serve six persons. Select your beef and the rest of the ingredients in the following recipe and get to work.

BEEF A LA RUSSE

Cut 2 pounds lean beef 1 inch thick into ½-inch strips. Heat 2 tablespoons fat in a skillet, add the meat, cover and cook slowly for 30 minutes. If necessary, add another bit of fat to keep meat from drying out. Add 2 tablespoons finely chopped onion, ½-pound chopped mushrooms, or a 4-ounce can of mushrooms in place of the fresh ones, then cover and cook for 10 minutes. Blend 1 tablespoon flour with the fat in pan, add 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon paprika, ½ teaspoon pepper and 1 cup sour cream. Cook slowly for 5 minutes, stirring to blend mixture. Then cover skillet and cook another 5 minutes. Serve hot with potato pancakes made this way:

POTATO PANCAKES

Peel potatoes and grate to make 2 cupsful. Add 2 well-beaten eggs, ¼ teaspoon baking powder, 1½ teaspoons salt and 1 tablespoon flour. Mix well. Drop the mixture on hot greased griddle and brown slowly, turn and brown on other side. Serve at once.

Anyone can cook a rump roast of beef to deliciousness. It takes a little longer time than broiling a chop but it's worth it for the sake of variety.

VEAL POT ROAST

Choose a 5-pound rump roast of veal, with the bone left in. Mix 1 tablespoon of dry mustard, 1 teaspoon of dry mustard, 1 teaspoon poultry seasoning, 1 tablespoon brown sugar, 1 tablespoon salt and pepper and rub mixture into the roast. Brown roast very slowly in 3 tablespoons fat in a heavy utensil—the more slowly browned the better the flavor. Add ½ cup diced onion, 2 tablespoons herb vinegar and cover tightly. Simmer over low fire for 2¼ hours. This process will makes its own gravy.

Town Talk

By Eva Hinton

A BEAMING deputy commander of the Wac, that's what Lieut. Col. Helen Woods is these days! And she has a right to beam because her three sons all are home from the war.

Last to arrive were Navy Lieut. John Woods and Paratrooper Capt. Leonard Woods. John started out from Tinian and came one way around the world, and Len came the other way around from China, and they both arrived in Washington on the same day.

With the third brother, Sandy, they expect to be in mufti soon and, I gather, intend to spend the rest of their lives NOT saluting mother.

I met up with Colonel Woods and Captain Woods the other afternoon at Maj. Jack Spelden's very pleasant cocktail party. With them were two other snappy-looking paratroop officers who arrived from China with the captain. One of them wore six overseas service bars on his sleeve and the other sported seven.

Len Woods remarked that the seven-bar man really should be wearing five more for previous service with the British, but that his pals decided against it for fear he would be unable to bend his arm.

I guess that not being able to bend his arm would hamper a paratrooper in about everything he'd planned to do on arriving home from overseas.

Major Speiden's own branch of the service, the Marine Corps, was handsomely represented that afternoon from Maj. Gen. Field Harris, Brig. Gen. W. L. McKittrick and Col. Clayton Jerome down to (or UP to, if you happened to be a homecoming paratrooper) pretty Marine Corpl. Emmie Franklin, niece-in-law of the host.

Guests of honor were Mr. and Mrs. George Francklyn Lawrence, and others included Mrs. Loring Christie, the Eugene Carusis, George T. Summerlin and Gen. Frank McCoy, who sits for the United States on the board which is discussing the control of Japan.

I'M AFRAID that Lawrence Houghteling is getting a taste for publicity. The other evening he paid a compliment to this column and he MUST have known I couldn't resist putting it in print.

It was at Carlton Holdredges' very nice buffet dinner, given to "warm" their newly added dining room. Dinner was served at small tables and the whole conversation seemed to be about "warming" something.

First it was the dining room, its warming greatly aided by charming pastels of Paris scenes done by the daughter of the house, Mrs. Alexander 3d. Then it was Col. Robert Guggenheim who had to be warmed. He had been duck shooting since 4 a. m. and was still shivering.

He was giving us a rather vivid description of dressing himself warmly for duck shooting. First he puts on THOSE, then he puts his feet through the sleeves of a sweater, pulls that up and goes on adding layers till he must look about the size of the Capitol dome.

Mme. Angelin, wife of the Swedish Naval Attache, said that in Sweden they had made thousands of vests of paper for war relief and that they are the warmest things ever.

At this point Mr. Houghteling said that the only thing warm enough for Colonel Guggenheim would be a vest made entirely of Town Talk columns. But no, on second thought it wouldn't do because all his fellow sportsmen would be standing right in front of him reading his vest and some of them would be shot instead of the duck.

And speaking of waistcoats (vests, if you insist). Prentiss Coonley was wearing a lemon-yellow one with his dinner jacket that night, very nice and not too striking. In fact, I'd been talking to him a while before I even noticed it.

Ranking guests at the Holdredges' dinner were Admiral and Mrs. Paul Bastedo and others were Commodore Angelin, Mrs. Ralph Worthington, Mrs. Houghteling, Mrs. Guggenheim, Mrs. Lawton and George Williams.

LIVING IN Colorado now is Mrs. Gordon Gouverneur Barnwall, who was Miss Rosalind Deterly Mullican, daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. C. Bowie Millican, Arlington, Va., before her recent marriage. Mr. Barnwall is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Gordon Barnwall, Washington. The newlyweds are students at the University of Colorado

Emily L. Owen Becomes Bride

Milton Fiske MacBride, Manhasset, N. Y., and his bride, the former Miss Emily Louise Owen, daughter of Marvin Owen and of the late Mrs. Owen, Jarratt, Va., are on their honeymoon in New England.

Their marriage took place recently in Fort Belvoir post chapel with Chaplain Robert Chamberlain performing double ring ceremony.

Aqua wool crepe with pink and black accessories costumed the bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Rawlings Owen. The bridal bouquet was of white orchids and a cameo pin, a family heirloom, was the bride's only ornament.

Miss Mildreed Owen, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor costumed in gray wool crepe with black accessories and orchid corsage.

Best man was Lieut. Svend Knudsen who served overseas with the bridegroom.

A reception was held in the home of the bride.

Mrs. MacBride was graduated from Farmville State Teacher's College and is a member of the Fort Belvoir faculty.

The bridegroom, after 4½ years of overseas duty, will resume his music studies in New York.

Armar Archbold to Wed; Mrs. James Says Goodby

By Marie McNair

Here's news!

Armar Edward Archbold, Mrs. Ann Archbold's son, is about to be married.

Announcement of the engagement comes from St. Paul, Minn., from Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gregory McNeely, parents of the bride-elect, Rosemary Jean.

Miss McNeely was graduated from the Convent of the Visitation and from Bennett Junior College, Millbrook, N. Y. She's a member of the St. Paul Junior League and during the war served as a Red Cross nurses' aide.

Mr. Archbold is the son of Armar Saunderson of England. He spent more than two years overseas as combat observer with the Eighth Air Force and has served four years in the Air Corps all told. A graduate of Choate School, the prospective bridegroom also attended St. George's School. He is an alumnus of the University of New York.

Mr. Archbold is the grandson of the late John D. Archbold who amassed a fortune when president of the Standard Oil Co. He has a brother, Lieut. John D. Archbold, USNR, and two sisters, Mrs. Nicol Smith, the former Miss Moira Archbold, and Mrs. Archbold Strauss.

Mrs. Archbold, so I'm told, will give her son and future daughter-in-law, her Virginia farm as a wedding present.

Mrs. James Leaving

This town is so full of interesting people who come and go, it's only by the barest chance that you catch up with them.

Leaving today for her home in New York is Mrs. Marquis James, who has been here for a week or more doing research work at the Library of Congress. Yesterday Mrs. Emil Hurja invited a few of the visitor's old friends in for tea to say "hello and goodby."

She's the wife of the noted author, winner of the Pulitzer prize for "The Raven: A Biography of Sam Houston," and "Andrew Jackson: Portrait of a President," much of the material for which was gathered from the Hurja collection of Jacksonia.

Mrs. Childs is a writer in her own right under the name Bessie Williams Rowland. She wrote the story of the Greely expedition and adapted one of her husband's books, "A Cherokee Stripped," for young readers, the book now being in use in the public schools.

While she was here Mrs. James also saw something of her daughter, Mrs. John Norwood, and her new baby son. Commander Norwood is on duty in Japan.

AAUW Asks Military Plan Clarification

By Genevieve Reynolds

The American Association of University Women has called upon President Truman to review and clarify the question of compulsory military training in the light of atomic energy and in the light of our international responsibilities. It strongly urged the Chief Executive to appoint a representative commission to study and to promptly recommend means of fulfilling our international commitments and our responsibilities as a member of the United Nations Organization.

Club Notes

Furthermore, the organization asked that the President appoint to the commission, representatives of men and women in Congress, the military, the diplomatic services as well as those in the physical and social sciences and the humanities.

Write Letter to President

Following a meeting of the AAUW's national board members here last week, the request was put in the form of a letter signed by Dr. Kathryn McHale, general director. The letter points out that AAUW represents 80,000 members throughout the States. It reads in part as follows:

"Mr. President:

"Since the membership (AAUW) had expressed deep concern with the problem of universal military training, the board gave considerable attention to the subject. There seems to be confusion in the public mind as to how military power can be projected into the new atomic age as a weapon for justice, human freedom and world peace. The whole conception of our future relationship with other countries has been changed by the release of nuclear energy and other new scientific developments. The problems they raise involve not only the physical sciences but social and political science. Humanity itself is at stake. Feeling the urgency of this situation, the national board believes that the public should be furnished with correct and considered information on the subject before the question of universal military training is decided. AAUW board members know from experience that when the public lacks information, tensions and conditions arise that produce divisions among people and nations."

Also the AAUW board acted to alert the membership to see that the United Nation's Charter is effectively implemented through (1) appointment of skilled personnel, (2) adequate financial support, (3) freedom for its various organs and subsidiary agencies to act, each in its own field of special competence.

Did You Know That . . .?

Washington Zonta Club celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of Zonta founders' day Wednesday. There was a birthday cake, prizes and speeches. One of the highlights of the program was a quiz contest on the history of the organization. Miss Mabel Strider, winner, was awarded a silver pin and earring set by Sarah Carrick, vice president. Again the silver motif was repeated when three charter members of the local club, Nan Street, Emma T. Harn and Estelle Parker, each were presented with a silver candle snuffer. Mrs. Josephine Prescott, president, presided, and Mrs. S. Winifred Burwell, program chairman, conducted the lively quiz.

Soroptimists are piling up records as war bond saleswomen. During the past week Estelle Zirkin sold bonds to the tune of $40,600 and Gertrude Sullivan negotiated sales for $35,000. All this was revealed at Washington Soroptimist Club's luncheon Wednesday at Hotel Willard.

The Rev. John Tracy, professor of history at Catholic University, who was guest speaker of the day, warned that moral politics must guide the Nation in international politics or the world will have its alternative—annihilation.

"Power politics have been employed by nations of the world throughout history," he said, "and its use has inevitably resulted in wars."

Coming Events . . .

National Park College Alumnae will meet Monday at 12:30 p. m. with Mrs. George R. Evans, St. Paul rd., Kensington. Orders for fruit cakes and plum puddings will be taken. Proceeds of the sales will be used for the regular monthly contribution to Children's Hospital . . . Ward-Belmont Alumnae Club will hold its monthy luncheon Tuesday . . . B'nai B'rith Women, Argo, will sponsor four musical programs during the season, proceeds of which will go to its postwar activities. Selma Stein, concert pianist and composer, will open the concert series November 14 in the Congressional Room at Hotel Statler . . . Unit 597, Navy Mothers Club of America, will entertain battle fatigue cases undergoing treatment at St. Elizabeths Hospital with a dance Sunday in the Red Cross clubroom. Dance music will be furnished by the Bureau of Standards Orchestra.

Hanson Named Top IBA Staff Officer Here

By S. Oliver Goodman

J. Clifford Folger of Washington, president of the Investment Bankers Association, yesterday announced the appointment of Col. Murray Hanson as IBA general counsel.

Col. Hanson

The appointment is an outgrowth of a Nation-wide referendum among investment bankers, Mr. Folger said, which contemplates expanding IBA activities. The referendum uncovered favorable sentiment toward increasing the association's representation in Washington. Colonel Hanson's office will be here.

The selection of Hanson as IBA top staff officer follows the recent announcement of the retirement of Alden H. Little as IBA executive secretary after 20 years' service.

Colonel Hanson, being relieved from active duty in the Army, has served since 1943 as assistant executive officer to Robert A. Lovett, Assistant Secretary of War for Air. A native of Baltimore, he attended the University of Delaware and Harvard Law School. In 1935 he came to Washington as representative of the Newton D. Baker law firm of Cleveland. Following the establishment of the National Association of Securities Dealers he continued in Washington, doing the major part of legal work for the NASD until going on active duty in the Army.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Bank "Pitfalls" Described

Pitfalls in banking operations that will result from the tremendous wartime and postwar increase in the money supply, were described last night by Stanley N. Shaw, associate editor, Whaley-Eaton Service, in a talk to the auditors section of the District Bankers Association at the Willard Hotel.

Discussing "Current Trends in Business," he said there need be no great concern in the next three years because there would be a business boom. He cautioned, however, that "Government bungling or bankers' carelessnee" could precipitate a later crisis very rapidly merely because of the plethora of money.

North American Net Dips

The North American Co. and subsidiaries reported yesterday net income of $18,666,921 for the year ended September 30, equal after preferred dividends to $1.73 a common share, against $19,491,377 for the preceding year, or $1.83 a share.

Net income for the quarter ended September 30 was $4,342,142, equal after preferred dividends to 39 cents a common share, compared with $4,423,406 for the same quarter of 1944, or 40 cents a common share.

E. L. Shea, president, said in a report to stockholders that some of "our companies have experienced sharp declines in sales" of power to industrial users since VJ-Day.

In order to increase plant additions, he said work had begun on projects of Union Electric Power Co. at Venice, Ill.; Wisconsin Electric Power Co. at Port Washington and Benning station of Potomac Electric Power Co. in Washington.

Peoples Drug Sales Up

Net sales of Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., and subsidiaries totaled $3,143,979 in October, an increase of 3.1 per cent over the same month last year. Treasurer W. H. Churchill pointed out that the chain operated 130 stores in October, against 131 in the same 1944 month. Volume for the first 10 months aggregated $28,567,348, a gain of $420,403 or 1.5 per cent over the like 1944 period.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Nov. 8 (AP).—Rye futures jumped the 3-cent daily limit in late trade today, influenced largely by strength in New York cotton and a big advance in Winnipeg rye. Other grains rallied in sympathy, with oats climbing more than 2 cents and wheat almost a cent.

December rye, tight and easily influenced by buying and short-covering, climbed 5 cents to 1.78¾ a bushel, a new 20-year peak, and then dropped slightly.

Rye closed unchanged to 4½ cents higher than the previous finish, December 1.78⅛; 1.78½; wheat was ⅛ to ⅞ up, December 1.80¼; corn was unchanged at 1.18½ ceilings; oats were ahead 1⅜ to 2⅛, December 73¼, and barley was unchanged to ⅛ up, December 1.21.

New York Cotton

New York, Nov. 8 (AP).—The cotton futures market rallied as much as $1.30 a bale today on a wave of mill and commission house buying inspired by the Department of Agriculture November 1 forecast placing the 1945 crop at 9,368,000 bales, the lowest since 1921.

The forecast, considerably under trade expectations, was 411,000 bales lower than the October 1 estimate and 2,860,000 bales smaller than the 1944 crop of 12,228,000 bales. The Bureau of Agriculture Economics intimated that the next forecast may be even lower since the last part of the crop has yet to be picked, and is vulnerable to unfavorable weather that may develop in November.
